Snow spares area

The Northwest suburbs were spared most of the fury of a mid-winter storm that dumped three to four inches of snow on central and northern Illinois.

The storm moved east of the Chicago area Tuesday night, leaving slushy and unpleasant conditions and causing a number of weather-related accidents in the area.

Heaviest snow accumulations were reported south and east of a line between Midway and O'Hare airports.

Suburban and state police reported between 25 and 30 accidents in the area late Tuesday afternoon and evening although none resulted in serious injuries.

The worst, a six-car, chain-reaction collision, occurred in Arlington Heights on Dundee Road, near Ill. Rte. 53 Frontage Road shortly before 8 p.m. Two persons were released after treatment at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

At mid-day Tuesday, the storm had forced early closure of Chicago public and many suburban schools while incoming flights at O'Hare Airport were delayed for as long as an hour.

The National Weather service said area residents could expect mostly sunny skies today with temperatures in the mid 20s.

Village may lose funding for Lake Arlington plan

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights is in danger of being cut off from state and federal funds for construction of its $10.4 million Lake Arlington project.

Village officials and state legislators are waging an uphill fight to get the 113-acre lake made part of the Des Plaines River Watershed Plan, which will be a blueprint for state and federally funded flood-control work in the McDonald Creek watershed.

Area leaders appealed to the Illinois Water Resources Commission for help during a meeting Monday at the Arlington Park Hilton and received some encouragement from James C. Kirie, commission member and trustee of the Metropolitan Sanitary District which is paying half the cost of the watershed plan.

"If the officials here come to the MSD and put pressure on the district, some of us could put pressure on the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (which is preparing the watershed plan;," Kirie said.

IN SEVERAL months of talks with MSD administrators, village officials have been unable to get Lake Arlington into the government's plan, said Village Pres. James T. Ryan.

"Write to the MSD board president, or me as chairman of the engineering committee and request a hearing," Kirie advised. "We'll bring the heads of the MSD bureaucrats and the Soil Conservation Service together. If you're wrong (about the project) we can't help you. But if you've got a leg to stand on, we can."

Lake Arlington is planned for 113 acres north of Palatine Road and east of Windsor Drive on McDonald Creek. It is designed to provide stormwater flood control and water recreation for Arlington Heights, Prospect Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Mount Prospect.

Instead of the lake, the Soil Conservation Service and the Army Corps of Engineers has proposed to dig an overflow ditch five-feet deep along a southern branch of McDonald Creek. This diversion channel will be comparatively inexpensive, $359,000, and provide adequate flood control, say federal engineers, who regard Lake Arlington as an expensive, largely recreational facility.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS counter that the diversion ditch will not solve the flooding hazard on the north reaches of McDonald Creek in Arlington Heights, and will have none of the esthetic and recreational benefits of the proposed lake for Northwest suburban residents.

"Arlington Heights and the Northwest suburbs are a giver within the state," State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, told the water resources commission. "The people of Arlington Heights give more in taxes, balanced against receipts, than any other part of the state.

Schlickman asked the water resource commission to help "reestablish priorities" so that state and federal tax dollars are available for Lake Arlington and "for the people of this part of the state who give more in taxes than they get back."

Arlington Heights and other Northwest suburban officials interested in Lake Arlington have little time left in which to change the course of the Des Plaines River plan. Public hearings already have been held, and a final draft of the plan is expected by mid-February.

"It will be very difficult to get any state funding if Lake Arlington is not in that report," said State Rep. Betty Lou Reed, R-Deerfield, another member of the water resources commission. "Everyone will be looking at the report for project funding."

STATE REP. Jack Williams, D-Franklin Park, commission chairman, said the commission would "lend whatever support it can" to the Lake Arlington Project.

Arlington Heights Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the village's flood-control committee, said Lake Arlington will probably be delayed for a long time if state and federal funds are not available to help pay the cost of construction. But eventually, as land near the creek is developed, the lake will be necessary even if the planned diversionary ditch is built.

Housing aid plan gaining village trustees' support

by BILL HILL

A housing assistance plan calling for 125 units of low-and moderate-income housing to be provided in Arlington Heights each of the next three years appears to have enough support from village trustees to gain approval Monday night.

The three-year goal of 375 units has met with little objection from village trustees during deliberations on the plan. It must be submitted to the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development if the board decides Monday to apply for $134,000 in community development funds.

The village board members showed a shift in favor of applying for the funds Monday when trustees voted 5 to 4 to have the village administration prepare the final application for the funds. The application will specify that the funds be used to acquire two lots on Vail Street for shopper parking.

"THAT VOTE may be indicative of the feeling of the board on the matter," said Village Pres. James T. Ryan. "I hope and expect that there will again be enough votes Monday."

A final vote on whether to submit the application will be made Monday at the regular village board meeting. It will begin at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The board also voted 5 to 4 Monday that the housing plan should specify any subsidized housing be on scattered sites in existing buildings.

Township aid requests in steady decline

Wheeling Township has used only 32.3 per cent of its general assistance budget through the first nine months of the fiscal year, representing a steady decrease in the number of aid applications.

The township budgeted $241,578 for fiscal 1975-76, but only $78,500 has been spent through November 1975. The fiscal year ends Feb. 29.

Charlene Hawthorne, coordinator of human services for Wheeling Township, said the number of applications for general assistance has been steadily declining since March 1975 when applications reached a peak. Only 27 new applications for general assistance were received in December, about half the March figure.

Township officials expect aid expenditures to remain level at $5,500 a month through the rest of the fiscal year.

General assistance covers the expense of food, rent and medical ex-

Beer drinkers, attention please. It's crying time again.

That old devil inflation is playing hob once more with your favorite beverage. The cost of your brew is rising just like its head.

If it were not getting so expensive, it might drive a person to drink.

Budweiser and the rest of the Anheuser-Busch line of beers greeted the New Year with a price increase of about a nickel a six-pack.

MILLER BREWING soon followed the lead of Bud, Michelob and Busch with similar price hikes.

C.S. Aulbert of the C.S. Aulbert Distributing Co., Arlington Heights, said increased labor, material and transportation costs led to the price increase. He said it is too soon to tell whether the higher prices will affect sales.

Despite the increased prices, Aulbert, who handles the Anheuser-Busch brands in the Northwest suburbs, said beer is still a bargain.

"Beer hasn't kept up with the rest of the price index," he said.

WHILE MILLER and Budweiser made the New Year's leap, other brands are playing a waiting game.

Quad County Distributing of Geneva, which distributes Stroh's in the Chicago area and Miller and Heineken farther to the west, reports that most breweries will raise their prices soon.

"It was expected in January. Miller's is up already and we're waiting for Strohs'," a company spokesman said. "Everybody's doing it."

The key to price hikes could be Schlitz, according to beer watchers. Schlitz is expected to match the Anheuser-Busch increases soon.

"They're all waiting for Schlitz," said Ron Shor about the other brewing companies.

SHOR, MANAGER of Foremost Liquors in Arlington Heights, said while Budweiser may affect a part of the market, the other big brewery, Schlitz, is the trend setter.

"Budweiser is so big they can do pretty much what they want. Augie (Busch, the brewery owner) is a pretty independent guy," Shor said.

If Schlitz raises prices as expected, Shor said the others will follow along.

Price hikes or not, Shor said sales are pretty steady at this point.

"It won't hurt us. They'll just go to a cheaper brand. You know how beer drinkers are," he said.

THE ECONOMIZING beer drinker can find several brands on sale, he said, usually for less than $1.25 a six pack.

The same is true at World-Wide Liquors in Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Deerfield.

Dobbie Dobkin, manager, said confidently, "There will always be bargains."

Last week, he said, Red, White and Taxes, spending to head Walker's annual address

by STEVE BROWN

Advance reports on Gov. Daniel Walker's annual State of the State message, which will be delivered at noon today, indicate the governor plans to talk about spending and repeat his pledge not to raise taxes.

Victor DeGrazia, Walker's campaign manager, said "nothing startling" will be contained in Walker's remarks. He denied reports from several capitol observers who hinted Walker planned to lambaste the Illinois General Assembly, charging they are guilty of overspending during the past two years.

While Walker is not expected to dwell on the state's apparent fiscal crisis, a report to be issued today by Comptroller George Lindberg will. The report is expected to show the state's cash reserves have fallen to $12.1 million as of Dec. 31 — the lowest level in the past 15 years.

NO ADVANCE text of the governor's message was released, but DeGrazia said Walker will talk about taxes and spending, which have been familiar themes during his administration.

The Lindberg report is expected to show the state has spent $333 million more than it has taken in during the first six months of fiscal 1976, which began in July 1975.

Lindberg has been critical of the Walker administration in recent months, charging poor management by the governor has led to the current cash flow problems.

He also accused Walker of using Illinois businesses to help ease the financial crunch by delaying payment on some bills. Walker has denied systematic delays charges and said Lindberg has been incorrect in his fiscal predictions.

LINDBERG AIDES said the new report will show that while the state had a balance of $12.1 million on Dec. 31, about $40 million per day is needed to transact business.

The aides said they could not predict whether the state would have sufficient funds Friday to make the monthly $100 million payment to Illinois schools.

"It is just too close to call," one aide said. The report shows state spending has increased $110 million for public aid, $48 million for schools, $129 million for grants and other programs and $57 million for operations costs.

Officials said the increased costs for operation will be the biggest embarrassment to the governor because it involves new personnel and new programs.

They noted that state revenues increased by 9 per cent during the first six months of the year while state spending jumped about 17 per cent in the same period.

The General Assembly is scheduled to convene for a two-day session beginnng today. The agenda includes the governor's message and some routine business.

Some lawmakers will attempt to push through a three-month appropriation for the state racing board. The money for the board has been caught in the middle of a political controversy for some time and state racing officials have threatened to delay thoroughbred and harness racing in the state unless the appropriations are approved.

Road funds below par: contractors

by WANDALYN RICE

A group of area highway contractors say the state is not spending enough money on road repairs in the six-county Chicago metropolitan area and they have been meeting with Illinois Dept. of Transportation Director Langhorn Bond is an effort to change that.

William Salzman, president of Milburn Bros. contractors, Mount Prospect, and three other officials of the Illinois Road Builders Assn., met with Bond earlier this week to complain about the lack of road construction in the last few months.

Salzman said Tuesday Bond was "helpful and cooperative" and said the contractors plan to study problems which may interfere with highway money coming to the area in an attempt to propose solutions.

"About 60 per cent of the motor fuel tax funds are being paid from the six-county area," Salzman said. "But only about 25 per cent of the funds are being spent in the area."

STATE MOTOR fuel tax funds, which are collected on gasoline sales, are generally used to match federal highway funds which come to the state, Salzman said.

He said that in the last six months, contractors in the six-county area have noticed that very few state construction jobs were starting in the area. "There are usually about eight bid openings a year by the state and three of the last four have included almost no work in this area," he said.

Salzman said that in conversations with Bond the contractors realized "funding is very complicated." He said, "Before this we contractors have never gotten too nosy about where the funds come from, we've just known that bids come out and if we're lucky we get the job."

In the future, he said, contractors in the association, made up of about 100 firms in the six-county area, will study the funding and the problems facing the state and local communities.

ONE PROBLEM, he said, is that some money is funneled to local municipalities by the state for construction projects. "That takes a lot of paperwork by the villages and we think there is too much inertia in the funding process," he said. "We want to see if we can help the villages with that."

In addition, he said the contractors will try to determine whether politics, including the fight between Gov. Daniel Walker and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley over the proposed crosstown expressway, are affecting the way funds are allocated. "Some members of our association strongly suspect there is some connection," he said, "But that's very hard to prove."

Salzman said the shortage of road work in the area is contributing to the area's unemployment rate. "We are starting to get the support of the construction unions because they have hiring halls full of workers," he said.

$10,000 booty seized by cops

Hoffman Estates police Tuesday night smashed the remnants of a 10-man burglary ring believed responsible for more than 30 area break-ins. Police seized more than $10,000 worth of allegedly stolen items after searching two Hoffman Estates homes. Seven rifles, bomb assembly equipment, five pounds of suspected marijuana and Nazi Party and Ku Klux Klan literature were found at Tom Jaeger's home, 120 Thacker St. The 18-year-old Jaeger was being held in Hanover Park on weapons charges while the search was conducted. A search of a home at 118 Lincoln Dr. turned up items ranging from tools and fireworks to stereo equipment. The second suspect's identity was being held pending his arrest. Other members of the ring have been arrested in the last two months.

Residents lose $200,000

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott's office said Tuesday about 80 state residents who hoped to earn money by making Bicentennial plaques and then selling them to an Elk Grove Village firm, lost at least $200,000. James Zagel, head of the criminal law division, said he is investigating whether to prosecute the owner of DecoMak Inc., Loyie Sims, 50, Wauconda, under state theft statutes. Postal officials are also investigating whether mail fraud was involved in the year-old operation, which had been run at 1562 Carmen Dr. Scott's office last month obtained a Cook County Circuit Court injunction, barring the company from doing business.

Taxes, spending to head Walker's annual address

by STEVE BROWN

Advance reports on Gov. Daniel Walker's annual State of the State message, which will be delivered at noon today, indicate the governor plans to talk about spending and repeat his pledge not to raise taxes.

Victor DeGrazia, Walker's campaign manager, said "nothing startling" will be contained in Walker's remarks. He denied reports from several capitol observers who hinted Walker planned to lambaste the Illinois General Assembly, charging they are guilty of overspending during the past two years.

While Walker is not expected to dwell on the state's apparent fiscal crisis, a report to be issued today by Comptroller George Lindberg will. The report is expected to show the state's cash reserves have fallen to $12.1 million as of Dec. 31 — the lowest level in the past 15 years.

NO ADVANCE text of the governor's message was released, but DeGrazia said Walker will talk about taxes and spending, which have been familiar themes during his administration.

The Lindberg report is expected to show the state has spent $333 million more than it has taken in during the first six months of fiscal 1976, which began in July 1975.

Lindberg has been critical of the Walker administration in recent months, charging poor management by the governor has led to the current cash flow problems.

He also accused Walker of using Illinois businesses to help ease the financial crunch by delaying payment on some bills. Walker has denied systematic delays charges and said Lindberg has been incorrect in his fiscal predictions.

LINDBERG AIDES said the new report will show that while the state had a balance of $12.1 million on Dec. 31, about $40 million per day is needed to transact business.

The aides said they could not predict whether the state would have sufficient funds Friday to make the monthly $100 million payment to Illinois schools.

"It is just too close to call," one aide said. The report shows state spending has increased $110 million for public aid, $48 million for schools, $129 million for grants and other programs and $57 million for operations costs.

Officials said the increased costs for operation will be the biggest embarrassment to the governor because it involves new personnel and new programs.

They noted that state revenues increased by 9 per cent during the first six months of the year while state spending jumped about 17 per cent in the same period.

The General Assembly is scheduled to convene for a two-day session beginnng today. The agenda includes the governor's message and some routine business.

Some lawmakers will attempt to push through a three-month appropriation for the state racing board. The money for the board has been caught in the middle of a political controversy for some time and state racing officials have threatened to delay thoroughbred and harness racing in the state unless the appropriations are approved.

Road funds below par: contractors

by WANDALYN RICE

A group of area highway contractors say the state is not spending enough money on road repairs in the six-county Chicago metropolitan area and they have been meeting with Illinois Dept. of Transportation Director Langhorn Bond is an effort to change that.

William Salzman, president of Milburn Bros. contractors, Mount Prospect, and three other officials of the Illinois Road Builders Assn., met with Bond earlier this week to complain about the lack of road construction in the last few months.

Salzman said Tuesday Bond was "helpful and cooperative" and said the contractors plan to study problems which may interfere with highway money coming to the area in an attempt to propose solutions.

"About 60 per cent of the motor fuel tax funds are being paid from the six-county area," Salzman said. "But only about 25 per cent of the funds are being spent in the area."

STATE MOTOR fuel tax funds, which are collected on gasoline sales, are generally used to match federal highway funds which come to the state, Salzman said.

He said that in the last six months, contractors in the six-county area have noticed that very few state construction jobs were starting in the area. "There are usually about eight bid openings a year by the state and three of the last four have included almost no work in this area," he said.

Salzman said that in conversations with Bond the contractors realized "funding is very complicated." He said, "Before this we contractors have never gotten too nosy about where the funds come from, we've just known that bids come out and if we're lucky we get the job."

In the future, he said, contractors in the association, made up of about 100 firms in the six-county area, will study the funding and the problems facing the state and local communities.

ONE PROBLEM, he said, is that some money is funneled to local municipalities by the state for construction projects. "That takes a lot of paperwork by the villages and we think there is too much inertia in the funding process," he said. "We want to see if we can help the villages with that."

In addition, he said the contractors will try to determine whether politics, including the fight between Gov. Daniel Walker and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley over the proposed crosstown expressway, are affecting the way funds are allocated. "Some members of our association strongly suspect there is some connection," he said, "But that's very hard to prove."

Salzman said the shortage of road work in the area is contributing to the area's unemployment rate. "We are starting to get the support of the construction unions because they have hiring halls full of workers," he said.

$10,000 booty seized by cops

Hoffman Estates police Tuesday night smashed the remnants of a 10-man burglary ring believed responsible for more than 30 area break-ins. Police seized more than $10,000 worth of allegedly stolen items after searching two Hoffman Estates homes. Seven rifles, bomb assembly equipment, five pounds of suspected marijuana and Nazi Party and Ku Klux Klan literature were found at Tom Jaeger's home, 120 Thacker St. The 18-year-old Jaeger was being held in Hanover Park on weapons charges while the search was conducted. A search of a home at 118 Lincoln Dr. turned up items ranging from tools and fireworks to stereo equipment. The second suspect's identity was being held pending his arrest. Other members of the ring have been arrested in the last two months.

Residents lose $200,000

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott's office said Tuesday about 80 state residents who hoped to earn money by making Bicentennial plaques and then selling them to an Elk Grove Village firm, lost at least $200,000. James Zagel, head of the criminal law division, said he is investigating whether to prosecute the owner of DecoMak Inc., Loyie Sims, 50, Wauconda, under state theft statutes. Postal officials are also investigating whether mail fraud was involved in the year-old operation, which had been run at 1562 Carmen Dr. Scott's office last month obtained a Cook County Circuit Court injunction, barring the company from doing business.

Hard evidence lacking, but...

FBI gears for terrorist attempts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Director Clarence Kelley said Tuesday the FBI was preparing for terrorist attempts to "blow out the candles" on America's bicentennial celebration, even though hard evidence of such terrorism plans is lacking.

Kelley emphasized the FBI was not going to break any laws in keeping a watch over such activity, although he said "unusual methods" must be used.

The FBI chief added he was not aware of foreign-trained terrorists working in the United States, and specifically denied knowledge of members of the Palestine Liberation Organization operating here.

Kelley, speaking to a news media meeting sponsored by the National Security Council, said the bombing of LaGuardia Airport in New York City and Monday's discovery of three bombs at the United Nations were cause for concern as the nation opened its Bicentennial year.

He said the FBI has received information of threats to "disrupt the Bicentennial celebrations.

"We cannot say who this was, that this was a real threat," he said. "No, I don't have any hard facts, hard evidence that they will fulfill these threats."

Kelley added he was unable to say whether the LaGuardia bombing was a terrorist group. "At this point we don't know," he said.

"But at this time we are going to prepare for the worst: the boast that 'We are going to blow out the candles,' " Kelley said.

Kelley emphasized terrorist activity was the "ultimate evil" in the United States, but said few Americans are concerned until their lives are involved.

He said there were 89 bombings attributable to terrorist activity in the United States last year, up from 45 in 1974, and 24 in 1973.

Such activity killed 11 persons and injured 72 others last year and brought property damage to more than $2.7 million.

"I'm not saying that our nation is in imminent danger of being devastated by terrorists," he said, "Bud I do consider terrorism a very real and growing problem."

FBI DIRECTOR Clarence Kelley wipes forehead as he says terrorism is the ultimate evil, but few Americans seem concerned unless their lives are involved.

Resume Mideast talks in Geneva: Egypt

UNITED NATIONS N.Y. (UPI) — Egypt asked the U.N. Security Council Tuesday to call for resumption of the Geneva Middle East peace conference with full participation by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The request was made by Egyptian Ambassador Esmat Abel Meguid. Shortly before Meguid spoke, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had said in Cairo that Egypt would be willing to sit down at Geneva without the PLO and push for Palestinian participation once the conference was under way.

Meguid recalled a non-binding General Assembly resolution last fall that declared the PLO must take part in all Middle East peace efforts.

"This is proof of the world's conviction that no peace could be achieved without the full participation of the representatives of the main party to the conflict," he said.

He said Egypt, in asking for new Geneva talks, "insists that the PLO be invited to the conference on an equal footing with the other parties."

The Security Council began the second day of its Middle East debate with the United Nations closed to the public after three pipe bombs were found near the world organization and a fourth near the Iraq mission.

The PLO was seated in the council Monday with all the privileges of a U.N. member except the right to vote. Israel boycotted the debate, refusing to sit down with members of the guerrilla group.

The United States was the only council member to oppose PLO participation. The vote was 11-1, with Britain, France and Italy abstaining.

The Arab bloc chose the delegates of Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Libya and the PLO to draft a resolution expected to strengthen the PLO,s role in Middle East peace negotiations.

But Egypt's stand on the issue was unclear.

President Anwar Sadat said in Cairo that Egypt, while supporting the PLO demand for political recognition, believed Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 were the "foundation of the peace process" and should not be changed.

The resolutions, adopted after the 1967 and 1973 Middle East wars, do not specifically mention Palestinian rights.

Sadat said Egypt would be willing to return to Geneva without the PLO and push for Palestinian participation once the conference resumed.

PLO foreign policy adviser Farouk Kaddoumi made it clear in a speech to the council Monday night that his organization wants revision of the two resolutions to guarantee the Palestinians' right to a nation.

"We have legitimate national rights — not 'interests' as some like to put it," Kaddoumi said. "It is for the attainment of these national rights that the Palestinian people have resorted to armed struggle."

At a news conference outside the United Nations Monday, Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said his country would not attend the council debate because it would be negotiating "its own suicide."

The debate was expected to last about two weeks.

Probe prominent American fund-hiding

Grand jury subpoenas will be returned next Tuesday in an investigation into an alleged conspiracy by 1,000 or more prominent Americans suspected of hiding funds in foreign bank accounts to avoid income taxes. Justice Department Prosecutor Bernard Bailor estimated the investigation will last at least 18 months. The probe is expected to involve brokers, investors and corporations in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Miami, Las Vegas, Nev., Des Moines, Iowa, and Fort Lauderdale.

FTC wins $280,000 Geritol judgment

The Federal Trade Commission said Tuesday it has won a $280,000 judgment against the makers of Geritol — the largest civil penalty for false advertisement in the history of the FTC. The out-of-court settlement involves nine Geritol commercials showing on network television in 1969 which the FTC claimed violated an order which prohibited Geritol from making certain claims.

No CIA infiltration evidence: Church

Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Tuesday the Senate Intelligence Committee has found no evidence that the CIA again has infiltrated news, educational, religious, and cultural organizations. Church categorically denied press reports that the committee has uncovered evidence the CIA — in defiance of guidelines established in 1967 — "has continued to use this nation's private institutions for clandestine purposes." "I can flatly state that the committee has no evidence for such a charge," he said.

Cyclamate cancer evidence lacking: panel

A government advisory panel concluded Tuesday there is not enough evidence to place a cancer causing label on the artificial sweetener cyclamate, that was ordered off the market because of cancer suspicions. The six member committee of academic scientists also said that, on the basis of tests carried out so far, cyclamates cannot be completely cleared of all cancer causing potential. The findings now go to the director of the National Cancer Institute and eventually to the Food and Drug Administration, which must decide whether to allow cyclamates back into foods and drinks.

W. Europe press unmasks CIA agents

The press in Western Europe has unmasked dozens of alleged CIA agents in recent weeks and reportedly plans to reveal dozens more in the near future. In Washington, the State Department condemned the disclosures as "extremely irresponsible" and the CIA conceded it was "naturally concerned" about them. Richard Welch, the CIA's station chief of Greece, was assassinated Dec. 23 a month after the Athens News identified him and other American intelligence agents.

OAU's effort at peace in Angola fails

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (UPI) — The Organization of African Unity failed Tuesday in its efforts to bring peace to Angola, leaving the group more divided than at any time in its 13-year history.

"This is a sad day," Kenyan Vice President Daniel Arab Moi said. "We have failed Africa and the Angolan people."

The OAU's three-day meeting on Angola broke up at dawn with the 46 nations deadlocked over how to end the civil war in the former Portuguese colony.

As the meeting ended, the Soviet news agency Tass said the Moscow-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola captured the northern Angolan port of Ambrizete in a series of "impressive victories."

Peter Onu, the OAU's assistant secretary general, called the deadlocked talks "a traumatic shock for the organization."

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda said African nations cannot shape their own destiny. "Power is in the hands of the superpowers," he said.

But Ugandan leader Idi Amin, the OAU's president, said he is "very, very happy with the result" despite the failure of his last-minute attempts at reconciliation.

Amin said some agreement was reached, but did not elaborate beyond an official communique that referred the Angolan problem to the OAU's political bureau. The OAU will take up the issue again at talks next June in Mauritius.

Conference sources said the even split in the organization was irreconcilable.

One faction demanded recognition of the Popular Movement as the legitimate ruler of Angola. The other wanted to hold off recognizing the Popular Movement or its two pro-Western rivals.

The communique did not mention Cuban troops with the Popular Movement or South African forces with the National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

National Union leader Jonas Savimbi called the talks a victory because "a number of African countries showed the maturity of Africa by refusing to accept the pressure of propaganda applied on behalf of the Popular Movement."

"We are going home very much relieved," he said.

Dunlop quits in response to Ford veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary John Dunlop resigned Tuesday night in response to President Ford's veto of a labor picketing bill he supported, sources said.

Dunlop handed his resignation to Ford during a 35-minute meeting at the White House, according to administration and political sources. The President reportedly urged him to stay.

Dunlop's own aides declined to confirm the report.

The decision, expected to be announced formally Wednesday, came after some four weeks of deliberations. Many labor leaders had urged Dunlop to step down because the veto had hurt his credibility as a presidential adviser and spokesman.

Dunlop, 61, was expected to return to Harvard, which gave him a leave of absence to assume the top labor post nearly a year ago. His likely successor was chief federal mediator W. J. Usery.

During hs tenure as secretary, Dunlop developed a reputation as a dissenter among Ford's economic advisers, and a man who acts after he has created a consensus among his constituents in labor and management. As a result, he was won the trust of both labor and management.

Dunlop has been in and out of government many times over the years in various capacities, recently as director of the Cost of Living Council in 1973.

Iceland hit by powerful earthquake

HUSAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — The most powerful earthquake to hit Iceland in more than 40 years shattered homes in an isolated northern fishing village Tuesday, forcing all its inhabitants to flee in a sub-zero blizzard.

Civil defense officials in Husavik, 30 miles west of the stricken village of Kopasker, said it was a miracle there were no fatalities or serious injuries among the village's 150 residents.

"Of course there were injuries as a result of the quake, but no one was so badly hurt as to require hospitalization," a civil defense spokesman said.

The Uppsala Seismological Institute in Sweden said the quake measured 6.3 on the open-ended Richter scale, while the U. S. Geological Survey in Colorado put its strength at 6.5. A rating of seven is considered severe.

Icelandic geologists said the quake, centered about 30 miles off the northern coast, was the strongest to hit the island nation since 1934.

"We have been worried lately about the start of a new volcano on the island but we cannot say if this quake is its prelude," one geologist said.

Although the quake was felt through a 300-square-mile-wide area, Kopasker was the worst hit. One evacuee said, "All our homes have been damaged.

The out-of-court settlement involves nine Geritol commercials showing on network television in 1969 which the FTC claimed violated an order which prohibited Geritol from making certain claims.

No CIA infiltration evidence: Church

Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Tuesday the Senate Intelligence Committee has found no evidence that the CIA again has infiltrated news, educational, religious, and cultural organizations. Church categorically denied press reports that the committee has uncovered evidence the CIA — in defiance of guidelines established in 1967 — "has continued to use this nation's private institutions for clandestine purposes." "I can flatly state that the committee has no evidence for such a charge," he said.

Cyclamate cancer evidence lacking: panel

A government advisory panel concluded Tuesday there is not enough evidence to place a cancer causing label on the artificial sweetener cyclamate, that was ordered off the market because of cancer suspicions. The six member committee of academic scientists also said that, on the basis of tests carried out so far, cyclamates cannot be completely cleared of all cancer causing potential. The findings now go to the director of the National Cancer Institute and eventually to the Food and Drug Administration, which must decide whether to allow cyclamates back into foods and drinks.

W. Europe press unmasks CIA agents

The press in Western Europe has unmasked dozens of alleged CIA agents in recent weeks and reportedly plans to reveal dozens more in the near future. In Washington, the State Department condemned the disclosures as "extremely irresponsible" and the CIA conceded it was "naturally concerned" about them. Richard Welch, the CIA's station chief of Greece, was assassinated Dec. 23 a month after the Athens News identified him and other American intelligence agents.

Dunlop quits in response to Ford veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary John Dunlop resigned Tuesday night in response to President Ford's veto of a labor picketing bill he supported, sources said.

Dunlop handed his resignation to Ford during a 35-minute meeting at the White House, according to administration and political sources. The President reportedly urged him to stay.

Dunlop's own aides declined to confirm the report.

The decision, expected to be announced formally Wednesday, came after some four weeks of deliberations. Many labor leaders had urged Dunlop to step down because the veto had hurt his credibility as a presidential adviser and spokesman.

Dunlop, 61, was expected to return to Harvard, which gave him a leave of absence to assume the top labor post nearly a year ago. His likely successor was chief federal mediator W. J. Usery.

During hs tenure as secretary, Dunlop developed a reputation as a dissenter among Ford's economic advisers, and a man who acts after he has created a consensus among his constituents in labor and management. As a result, he was won the trust of both labor and management.

Dunlop has been in and out of government many times over the years in various capacities, recently as director of the Cost of Living Council in 1973.

OAU's effort at peace in Angola fails

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (UPI) — The Organization of African Unity failed Tuesday in its efforts to bring peace to Angola, leaving the group more divided than at any time in its 13-year history.

"This is a sad day," Kenyan Vice President Daniel Arab Moi said. "We have failed Africa and the Angolan people."

The OAU's three-day meeting on Angola broke up at dawn with the 46 nations deadlocked over how to end the civil war in the former Portuguese colony.

As the meeting ended, the Soviet news agency Tass said the Moscow-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola captured the northern Angolan port of Ambrizete in a series of "impressive victories."

Peter Onu, the OAU's assistant secretary general, called the deadlocked talks "a traumatic shock for the organization."

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda said African nations cannot shape their own destiny. "Power is in the hands of the superpowers," he said.

But Ugandan leader Idi Amin, the OAU's president, said he is "very, very happy with the result" despite the failure of his last-minute attempts at reconciliation.

Amin said some agreement was reached, but did not elaborate beyond an official communique that referred the Angolan problem to the OAU's political bureau. The OAU will take up the issue again at talks next June in Mauritius.

Conference sources said the even split in the organization was irreconcilable.

One faction demanded recognition of the Popular Movement as the legitimate ruler of Angola. The other wanted to hold off recognizing the Popular Movement or its two pro-Western rivals.

The communique did not mention Cuban troops with the Popular Movement or South African forces with the National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

National Union leader Jonas Savimbi called the talks a victory because "a number of African countries showed the maturity of Africa by refusing to accept the pressure of propaganda applied on behalf of the Popular Movement."

"We are going home very much relieved," he said.

Iceland hit by powerful earthquake

HUSAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — The most powerful earthquake to hit Iceland in more than 40 years shattered homes in an isolated northern fishing village Tuesday, forcing all its inhabitants to flee in a sub-zero blizzard.

Civil defense officials in Husavik, 30 miles west of the stricken village of Kopasker, said it was a miracle there were no fatalities or serious injuries among the village's 150 residents.

"Of course there were injuries as a result of the quake, but no one was so badly hurt as to require hospitalization," a civil defense spokesman said.

The Uppsala Seismological Institute in Sweden said the quake measured 6.3 on the open-ended Richter scale, while the U. S. Geological Survey in Colorado put its strength at 6.5. A rating of seven is considered severe.

Icelandic geologists said the quake, centered about 30 miles off the northern coast, was the strongest to hit the island nation since 1934.

"We have been worried lately about the start of a new volcano on the island but we cannot say if this quake is its prelude," one geologist said.

Although the quake was felt through a 300-square-mile-wide area, Kopasker was the worst hit. One evacuee said, "All our homes have been damaged.

Game for liars now a white elephant

Watergate satire haunts creator

by KAREN BLECHA

Don't mention Watergate to Joe Sugarman. It brings back a lot of bad memories. To him and Richard Nixon.

Sugarman of Northbrook is one half of the team that created the Watergate Scandal, a card game designed in May 1973, to make money and poke fun at the nation's most infamous debacle. It poked fun, all right. But it didn't make him any money.

And now Sugarman sits in his Northbrook office, a successful businessman in other ventures, wondering how to get rid of 50,000 of the games stockpiled in a warehouse at 1955 Estes Ave., Elk Grove Village. The going price was $2.99 back in 1973.

Now Sugarman says he'll sell them for a nickel apiece to any retailer who wants to take the bundle off his hands.

"BELIEVE ME, I'm really trying to forget about all this," says Sugarman, 37, father of two small children. "I don't want my kids to ever see that game."

The game is relatively simple. Inside a 5-by 7-inch box is a deck of special playing cards with names like "phone tapper" and "campaign aide" written on them. The object is to out deceive your opponent by lying about the cards you hold.

Bribery, treachery and cover-up are musts. A player draws a penalty card if he guesses wrong about whether another player is lying or not.

"It's a lot of fun when you start, but after about two hours you get bored," admits its creator. "After about 10 hours, you get kind of sick."

IN THE WATERGATE Scandal everyone is a loser. Sugarman just didn't figure he would be one too. At least, he says, he nearly broke even.

"It started okay at first," says Sugarman, who introduced the game at a press conference at, where else, the Watergate Hotel in Washington, D. C.

"It sold well in New York and California . . . what doesn't sell well out in California?" he asks. "Of the 200,000 games we sold, 50,000 we sold out of the states; 40,000 went to Australia; 10,000 were sold in Canada."

Then things started going wrong. Retailers who ordered the game sent it back because of its controversial nature. Retailers in the Midwest were the most conservative of all, Sugarman says.

"We had a product the consumer wanted to buy. But we didn't have the retailers who wanted to sell it," Sugarman says. By the time he and his partner, Howard Mercer, realized what was happening, it was too late to try selling the game by mail order.

"THEN IT WAS no longer a unique product. There was a lot of competition on the market and some publications wouldn't even take our advertisements," he says.

"We became the unscrupulous profiteers, profiteering on the Watergate scandal. We didn't intend it to turn out that way. We wanted to poke fun at a very serious subject we thought needed poking fun at. Most people didn't take it as such — they took it as a ploy to make a few bucks. It was a ploy to make a few bucks, but we wanted to have fun too."

Sugarman says the only people who ever made any money off the project are his lawyers who checked out the legal aspects of the game before it was marketed. The game came out 10 days after Sugarman and Mercer, a Los Angeles businessmen, created it while watching a Black Hawks hockey game on television.

Sugarman says he never heard anything about the game from anyone involved in Watergate. "We did know that when E. Howard Hunt was in jail his wife brought him a copy of the game to autograph for a neighbor," he says. "But prison officials refused to let it through the bars."

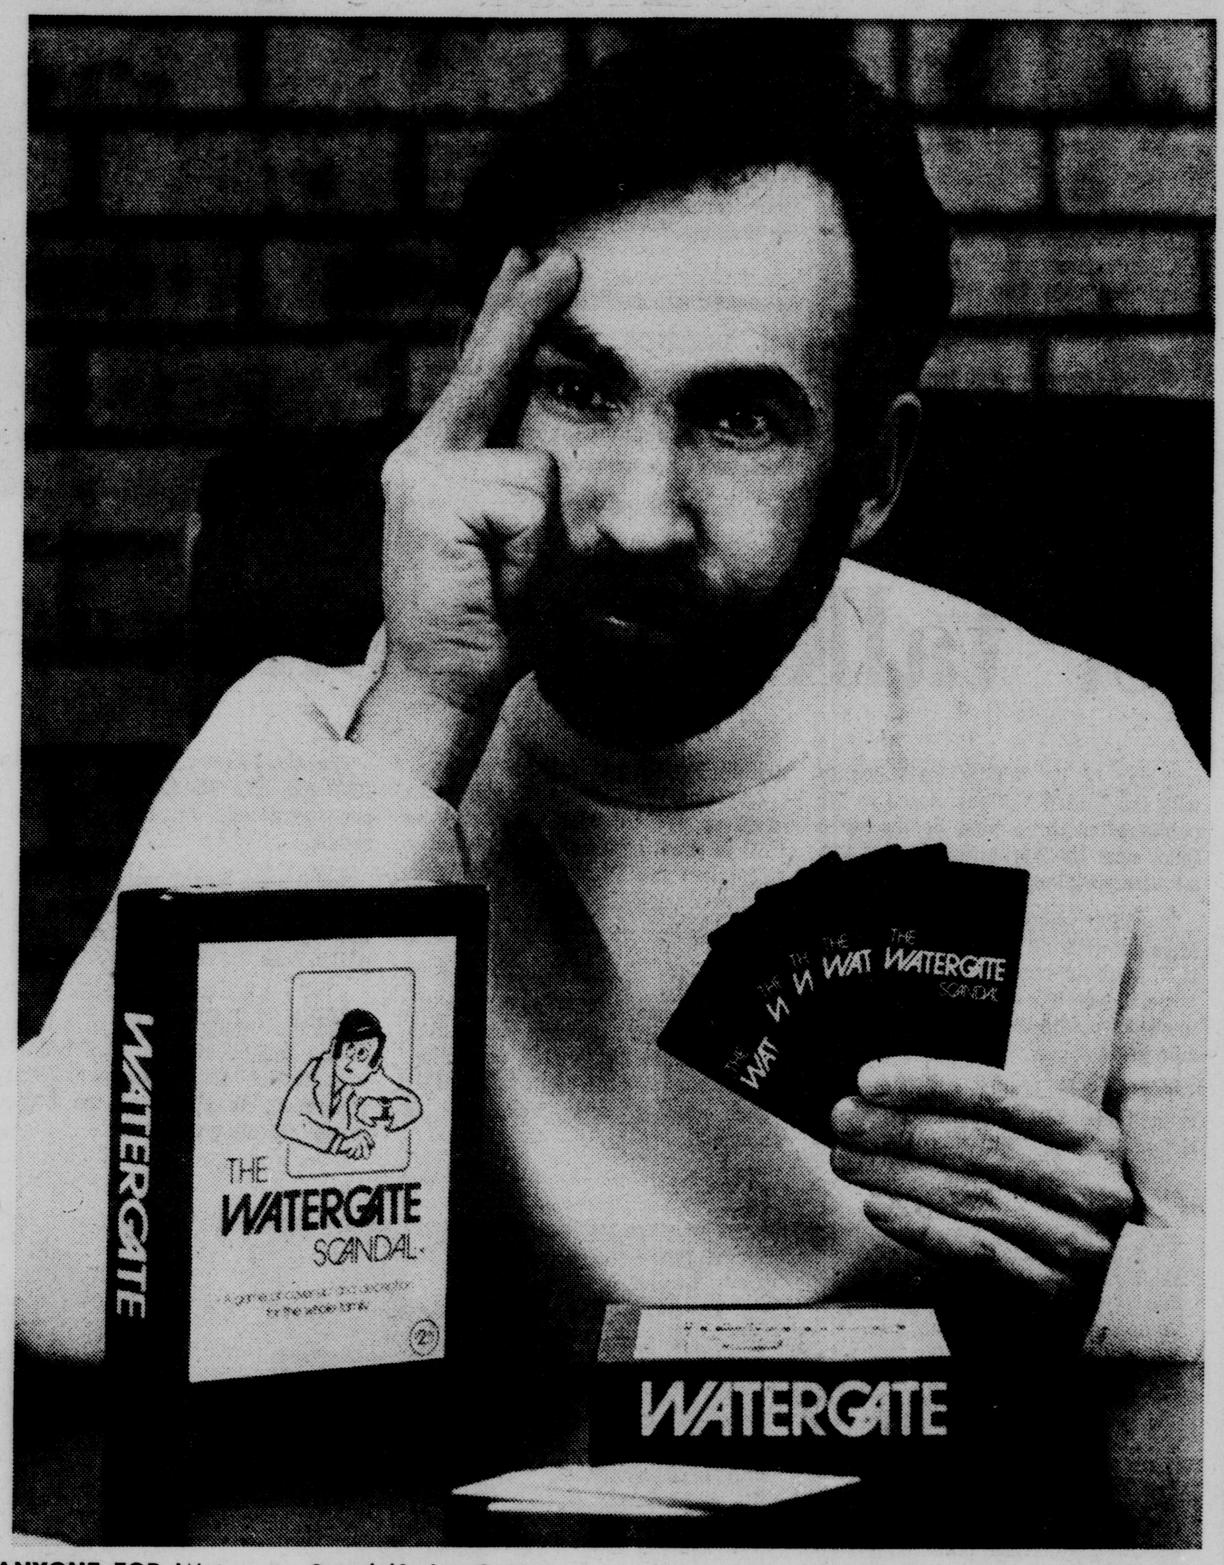
THEN THE WATERGATE Scandal game had its own Watergate. Sugarman says when things turned sour, his partner took off.

"There was a little cover up and a little deception right here," he says. "Mercer disappeared and left me with a lot of bills."

Sugarman now heads JS&A National Sales Group, a much more successful enterprise which markets calculators, digital watches and other "space-age products" through mail order. He admits he got a lot of experience in the Watergate venture from traveling around the country, from appearing on TV talk shows to being quoted in national magazines.

But he says, if he had the chance, he wouldn't do it over again.

He made one New Year's resolution a couple of years back, and he's stuck to it ever since. He vows he'll never play the game again.



ANYONE FOR Watergate Scandal? Joe Sugarman demonstrates how to play the unsuccessful game he created in March 1973. "It's really kind of a lousy game," he admits.

Panel discusses budget, curriculum problems

State called school system villain

The Illinois General Assembly controls the schools, but its method of operation is overloading curriculums and pushing school budgets into deficits.

This was the consensus reached during a panel discussion Monday night which included State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, Jonathon Howe from the Illinois Assn. of School Boards and David Tomchek from the Illinois Education Assn., a statewide teachers union.

The discussion topic was school control, but when the three quickly agreed that the state legislature has all the power, the discussion turned to school funding and mandated curriculums.

"The real school board in Illinois is the state legislature," Mrs. Chapman said. "Since the legislature supplies more than 48 per cent of the funds and in many cases decides how it will be spent, it's the legislature that gives the local school boards any power that they have."

THE AUDIENCE, made up of Phi Delta Kappa members who are predominantly teachers and school administrators, asked Mrs. Chapman why the legislature uses its power to require an ever-increasing subject load and then cuts back the amount of money schools need to fund those loads.

"When is the legislature going to slow down?" asked one person in the audience. "We need more hours in the day to teach the kids all the things the state requires us to."

"Certainly the federal government has a reason to set some national education goals and this is also true on the state level," Mrs. Chapman said, noting recent laws passed to eliminate sexual and ethnic discrimination in the schools.

"I used to be against earmarking school funds for certain things, but not anymore," Mrs. Chapman said. "There are things I want to see local school boards doing, and earmarking the state funds may not be the best way to do it, but it usually gets the job done."

BUT SHE SAID that "the legislature is composed of many people with many different interests" who all may have a special interest like conservation or consumer education which they think should be taught in the schools.

Cost of beer on the way up

Blue beer was on sale for 99 cents a six-pack.

Dobkin said beer drinkers will "be more selective. If they're used to paying a $1.55 a six pack, they'll look around to see what their $1.55 will buy. They may switch brands."

LIKE OTHERS, he said it was too early to tell if sales will be hurt.

He said that beer is a relatively low-cost indulgence for most buyers.

"It's a luxury item sure, but it's one that most people can afford. Look at the cost of going to the movies now," he said.

Dobkin came up with a novel reason for enjoying a tall cool one: It helps come April 15.

"I hate to think what income taxes would be without it. Fifty-nine per cent of the cost on all our (liquor) items is either state, county or federal tax. It's a good idea to buy more beer and cut your income taxes," he offered.

And, he failed to mention, it will give you something to catch the tears while you fill out Form 1040.

Money monitor to be advocated

The special committee studying social services will recommend an overseer to monitor those agencies and programs receiving village money.

The committee, headed by former village Pres. Ralph Clarbour, called for the creation of the overseer position within the village administration to assure the village is getting the services promised for the funds supplied.

Mary Schlott, committee member, said the administration should start its planning now for the position, with an eye on hiring either a present village employe or someone from outside for the role.

"It's a money control question," Mrs. Schlott said.

THE NEW POST, according to the committee, would provide continuing controls and inspection of programs funded by the village. They said it was a better method than the trustees' attempts to review all the agencies at once, just before budget allocations are made.

It was decided that an outside consultant would not provide the needed continuing inspections and necessary follow-up action that someone within the village could provide.

The proposed monitor position will be part of the final committee report to be completed by the end of the month. The committee hopes to meet with the trustees in early February to discuss their recommendations and suggestions.

Originally it was planned that the social service committee could give the trustees guidelines for evaluating the social agencies during this year's round of budget hearings. The committee decided, however, there would not be enough time to have a direct influence this year.

PAUL HAUER, committee member, said, "We'll have to tell the trustees, 'You're on your own for making the decisions this year.' "

Hauer said that the procedures, including the overseer, could be set up now so that the continuing review would start immediately and the full effects would be felt at next year's budget sessions.

Part of the procedure would be a "super social service agency" that would screen requests and set up a request procedure for programs seeking village money. There would be a set of steps to follow and requirements similar to procedures adopted by the village plan commission.

Part of the requirement would be a statement of objectives by the agency. At the end of the year, the trustees could see whether the agency had been effective in meeting those goals.

Housing aid the 'rub' in U.S. funding

Like a number of other suburban communities, Des Plaines has found applying for community developments funds poses one problem.

To get funds, a housing assistance plan must be filed, and rather than do so, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert H. Behrel Tuesday said the city would not apply for the second consecutive year.

"We feel that if we have to tell them (U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development) about a housing assistance program, we're getting into a touchy area as far as our people are concerned," Behrel said. "A good portion of our people moved out of the central city becauses of housing programs that invite minority groups."

Sixteen (including Arlington Heights) of 527 eligible communities last year chose not to apply for the funds. They included Oak Lawn, Cicero and Berwyn in the Chicago area.

BUT THE HOUSING PLAN requirement did not discourage the other 97 per cent of the eligible communities from applying.

Evanston "wasn't as afraid as some were of the housing plan" because its city council had already decided more low-and moderate-income housing was needed, said Bryan Noreen of the Evanston planning department.

"Our major housing questions had already been decided," Noreen said.

Evanston used the funds for such programs as park improvements, acquisition of a pool hall for a community center, rehabilitation of a child care facility and development of a housing information service, he said.

Oak Park used the $156,000 in community development funds it received last year to improve lighting and parking facilities in an area that borders Chicago, to resurface streets, to resotre a Frank Lloyd Wright home and studio and to preserve and restore a railroad shelter, according to Jack Seto, senior planner for Oak Park.

OAK PARK ALSO received objections to its plans to apply for the funds because "there were already plans to develop low-and moderate-income housing," Seto said.

Seto's only complaint with the program was that HUD "misled" Oak Park to believe that some of the funds could be used for the hiring of housing and senior citizen counselors, but later said those were not elibible activities for the funds.

Skokie also again intends to apply for the funds. Last year the city used them for improvements on an open space area and now is considering the development of a nature farm and bicycle paths there, said planning director Robert Molumby.

Molumby and Noreen did say HUD has not yet issued regulations for the second-year funds and that second-year applications still had not been printed.

They have been told by HUD to use the first-year applications for now.

"I'm not ready to condemn HUD for those problems yet," Noreen said. "Everyone is kind of new with this block grant program."

fied by the village administration before Monday because of objections from village trustees.

Assistant Village Mgr. Frank Charlton Tuesday said he hopes the village administration will be able to update a housing survey conducted by the village in 1971 to avoid using 1970 census data.

The current plan uses 1970 census figures. It states that 1,584 families are currently in need of housing assistance. It also estimates that 478 additional families would reside in Arlington Heights if subsidized housing were made available.

The methodolog, and numbers used to derive those figures have been questioned extensively by several village trustees.

"THE THING that really bothers me is that this is 1976, but we're using 1970 (census)figures," said Trustee August Bettman. "I find those figures damn hard to swallow. No one can convince me that 71 per cent of the job force in Arlington Heights earns less than $10,000 a year. Maybe in 1970, but not in 1976.

"We have one of the fastest growing communities in the United States. I don't want to send something to Washington based on 1970," Bettman said.

Trustee Madeline Schroeder also asked for "a better explanation" for the report's assumption that 71 per cent of the job force in Arlington Heights earns less than $10,000 a year.

Mrs. Schroeder also questioned why assistance is set at 1,584 when it was only estimated to be 923 on the plan prepared last year.

HANK PLUSTER of the village's planning department said last year's figure was a miscalculation "caused by discrepancies in the computer readout received from HUD (U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development)."

The figures in last year's plan were also lower because data from the survey taken in 1971 were used instead of 1970 census data, Charlton said.

"We have to take a close look at the figures, since we must be able to justify our computations," Ryan said.

Center assists minorities with finding housing

by JOE FRANZ

Minorities have made some progress in finding jobs in the suburbs, but they have had little luck in finding housing because of its cost.

Clyde H. Brooks, president of the Minority Information Referral Center, 694 Lee St., Des Plaines, said the organization has had "some success" in placing blacks and other minorities in suburban jobs in the last three years.

But the pay for many of the jobs, he said, is not high enough to enable the minorities to buy or rent suburban housing.

"IN MY JUDGMENT, finding housing is much more difficult than finding jobs," Brooks said. "The problem isn't that there's a lack of housing, but that there's a lack of adequately-priced housing."

Suburban housing often is not affordable, Brooks said, because minorities traditionally have been offered only low-paying jobs by suburban companies.

"That's why we ask companies to make their top jobs as well as other jobs available to minorities," he said. "Otherwise the jobs are incompatible with housing."

Jolyn Chiero, the center's housing administrator, said another problem is that discimination is more common in housing than in the job market.

"To a lot of people a black person on the job is a lot less of a threat than a black person on their block," she said.

BARBARA KLAYUM, the center's employment administrator, said she believes housing discrimination is more common than that in employment because of differences in laws.

"The laws regarding housing have less teeth and means of enforcement than those for employment," she said. "Employers are much more hard pressed to hire minorities."

The center, an arm of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was established in March 1973 to promote economic opportunity for minorities in the suburban Cook, Lake, Kane and Dupage counties. Finding jobs and housing for minorities are two of its primary services.

Brooks said despite the problems, he believes the center has made great strides in helping minorities since its early days when it operated out of a trailer at Maryville Academy. The center has grown from an annual budget of $800 to one of nearly $200,000, he said.

SINCE THE CENTER was opened, Brooks said, it has helped hundreds of persons find employment and housing in the suburbs.

From January through September of last year, the center received 1,500 employment applications and was able to place 276 of the applicants in jobs. The center found housing for 36 of 124 applicants during the same period.

"I'm not saying we've won any battles that others have lost, but we have accomplished a lot in the short time we've been here," he said. "I think the work of the center has brought a lot of problems to light and helped a lot of people."

Brooks readily admits, however, that there is much more that can be done and that the greatest challenges for the center lie in the years ahead.

"WHILE SOME BLACKS have made it to suburbia and to high positions in white collar jobs, it's worth pointing out that it's just a few," he said. "The masses of black people remain locked out of suburban areas and employment due to a lack of public transportation, sexism and racism."

Brooks said the center works closely with about 40 suburban companies in placing minorities in jobs. It also attempts to work with real estate agents and housing management firms in finding housing for minorities.

"The center seeks to work with suburban industry and government and anyone else who is concerned about helping black or poor people," he said.

The center now employes a dozen full-time workers and counselors as well as a number of volunteers. Brooks said although most of the staff's time is spent in trying to find jobs for minorities, there are an increasing number of applicants for housing. He estimates that minorities make up about 4 to 5 per cent of the suburban population.

penses until unemployed residents qualify for the county welfare program.

"I don't think we'll see too much more of an increase or a decrease in general assistance in the next few months unless the weather gets very bad and construction workers come in to apply," Mrs. Hawthorne said. "Otherwise, I think we have leveled off from last year's boom."

THE BOOM in applications last year was caused by the poor economy and several strikes, Mrs. Hawthorne said.

Townships are required by law to offer a form of emergency assistance to township residents for food, rent and medical expenses.

The applicants stop receiving general assistance when they receive welfare payments or unemployment compensation, Mrs. Hawthorne said.

Wheeling Township's general assistance revenues are generated by a 1.8 cent per $100 assessed valuation tax paid by residents each year. The tax rate was doubled last year as a result of the increase in general assistance applications.

The way we see it

Walker is a politician, too

In 1972, Daniel Walker ran for governor as the independent political candidate.

Today, it has become more evident that Walker is no different than most other politics-as-usual candidates, and if incidents like the one with his opponent over financial disclosure continue, Walker's cries of outrage against Mayor Daley and machine politics no longer will be listened to by the people of Illinois.

Walker has attacked regular Democratic Party gubernatorial candidate Michael Howlett on the issue of financial disclosure. At the same time, Walker continues to refuse to reveal the names of the persons who contributed to his 1972 campaign, even though Howlett has named the top 50 contributors to his campaign.

It is such Walker rhetoric being bandied about these days that raises the eyebrows of those who supported him because they thought he was different from the other politicians.

Some Northwest suburban Democratic committeemen contend that Walker, who persistently has opposed patronage, has used state jobs and the threat of political opposition to try to force the committeemen to support his reelection drive.

Walker supporters deny the charge. Regardless, these are the kinds of charges which continue to surface every week.

At about the time he was attacking the regular Democratic Party's slatemaking process, Walker was introducing a group of candidates for state office who look curiously like a "slate" made up by the governor.

As some people contend, it may be that these incidents are no more than the ordinary process of politics in which campaign half-truths are predictable.

However, there are still some who believe those tactics are not a necessary part of politics. Many of those people supported Walker in 1972 because of that belief.

Included in that group is the Independent Voters of Illinois organization, which supported Walker in the 1972 primary. Today, the group can no longer support the governor.

Another independent organization supporting Walker in 1972 — the Independent Precinct Organization of Chicago — decided against doing it again.

It is time that Walker and his campaign aides realize they cannot have it both ways. They cannot oppose political tactics while adopting many of those tactics themselves.

Keep your eyes on my opponents' disgusting behavior!

Civil Defense 'downfall' ripped

Upon reading your article in the Jan. 10 edition of your paper on the proposed disbanding of the Arlington Heights Civil Defense, I found myself confused, mad, disappointed and just plain disgusted. I am a member of the "dying" Arlington Heights Civil Defense, and I cannot see how Mr. Weinand could make the remarks he did. It is of no surprise to me that our Civil Defense has become so ineffective when you consider that, as director of the Arlington Heights Civil Defense, Mr. Weinand has done absolutely nothing. Having been a member of our Civil Defense for a year, I feel the community should know a few facts about their civil defense and how it has been run.

• I have never been told, nor do I think there was ever an "official" Civil Defense meeting held in the year of 1975.

• We, as members, have never been trained in crowd control, first aid or disaster assistance.

• Unlike our surrounding communities, our directors have refused to set up a citizens' band radio network, so we, as members of Arlington Heights Civil Defense, can communicate with our neighboring civil defense agencies. We can only use the telephone to contact the other towns in the case of an emergency.

I believe that the downfall of our Civil Defense was politically motivated. I wonder how many taxpayers really know why we are being shut down. In your article, it stated that the cost of keeping the Civil Defense operating was too high, yet the main reason the village wants to shut us down is because we, as volunteers, will do the same duties for free that the auxiliary police of Arlington Heights gets paid for doing. A case, in fact, was Halloween, 1974.

The Civil Defense set up sections of the town which we patrolled to help stop the Halloween vandalism, which occurs yearly. The Arlington Heights Auxiliary Police did the same thing. The big difference was the fact that we provided this service to the taxpayers of Arlington Heights absolutely free, whereas the auxillary police get paid, and as citizens, we all know where that money came from, our taxes. The fact remains that certain factions of our village government do not want the Civil Defense doing something for free that their employes can get paid for with the cold, hard cash from Arlington Heights taxpayers' pockets.

He hits deficit spending

The Jan. 6 Fence Post letter by Mr. Gates entitled "Fiscal responsibility: is it too late?" would have the reader believe that deficit financing by our government is really beneficial to our economy. This is indeed wrong, as most people in our congressional district realize. According to a poll conducted by Congressman Crane, 93 per cent would favor reducing government spending even if it means cutting out some programs. The previous letter on the same subject, by Mr. Dix, which Mr. Gates criticized, was correct in saying that deficit spending forces our government to borrow all available money which might otherwise be used by private industry to build factories and employ more people. I might add that in addition to this borrowing our government must seek permission to print more money from the Federal Reserve Board, and that we even pay interest on the money that is printed. This interest amounts to approximately 10 per cent of our tax dollars.

John Kenneth Galbraith, this nation's foremost spokesman for this Keynesian deficit spending, suggested several years ago that New York City had no problems that could not be solved by doubling its budget. New York City did better than that. It tripled its budget, and we have just witnessed the result of this insane theory of economics.

Still another classic example of deficit spending was seen in Germany in 1923. After seven years of deficit spending and inflation, it took four trillion, two billion German marks to equal one American gold dollar. Those who had jobs were actually paid by bushels full of the worthless paper money.

Deficit spending should be considered a crime, especially when one considers the hardship that it causes on retired people living on a fixed income. Consider also the hardship and frequent loss of one's entire life's savings when one loses his job and cannot find another one.

In this election year, let us really make deficit spending an issue.

She's shocked by pro-abortion argument

The arguments used by pro-abortionists are ridiculously stupid and ignorant. I am shocked to hear otherwise sensible adults claim that the unborn child is not human life and the mother has a right to do with her body what she wishes. Since when? At conception a totally new human being is created, one who has chromosomes and a life genetic code. All this potential adult needs is time to grow and develop. And the unborn infant is not a part of its mother's body.

The unborn child is a combination of the father and mother, a new and different person. The mother is the life support system on which the new individual depends for its needs until it is physically mature enough to enter the outside world.

The pro-abortionists also argue that abortion is good for couples who want to limit family size, for women who financially, physically or mentally cannot afford a child and abortion will curtail teen-age pregnancies. These are totally illogical arguments. There are hundreds of birth control measures a couple can use if they are sincere about not having children. And teen-age pregnancies would certainly drop if parents would take the time to teach basic moral values and a little sex education. After all, why should an innocent child be denied life because his or her parents made a "mistake," or were too apathetic to use available birth control measures?

What the pro-abortionists are really saying (as is obvious by the stupidity of their main arguments) is that they do not want to face up to the responsibilities of lovemaking. The pro-abortionists would rather slaughter America's future generations than take the few precautions necessary to prevent conception. Rather than stand up like responsible men and women and face the consequences of their act, by either having the child and raising it or giving it up for adoption, they have the completely innocent, totally defenseless unborn child coldly and brutally murdered and then go on their merry way as if nothing happened.

Is this America today?

Let's try food codes

We agree with Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones who said recently he believes the Village of Palatine may be acting prematurely if it legislates to force food stores to continue itemized pricing.

Jones' comments came after Palatine officials discussed the Universal Product Code system in which a computer is used to check out merchandise in grocery stores. All items are stamped with a code which can be read only by a computer, eliminating individual pricing.

Opponents of the system say it will eliminate the consumers' means of comparative shopping.

But we believe the pricing system has merit if the supermarket, by saving money, will pass the savings on to the consumer. Further, it is our understanding that supermarket operators intend to keep marking prices on the shelves so the shopper would not actually be buying merchandise without knowing its price.

Naturally, the shortcoming is the possibility of a faulty computer.

Several communities, including Palatine, are considering a restrictive ordinance to protect the consumer.

However, we suggest restraint on the part of local officials who now are being confronted by concerned consumers who fear the worst in the new pricing system.

We suggest local officials and consumers wait patiently until the system is evaluated. The Dominick's store in Morton Grove is one of the first in the metropolitan area to have the new system, and we will be anxious to see how that test store fares with consumers.

'Primary only a guidepost'

New Hampshire: only the start

by ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was Grantland Rice who told of us sports: "It's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game."

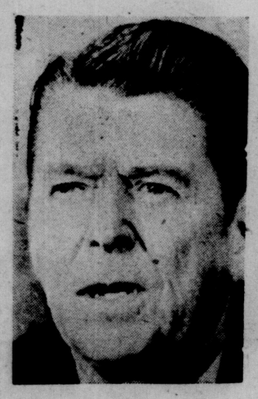
Now Ronald Ragan is trying to persuade us that the same thing applies to politics.

Specifically, the former California governor's campaign managers are saying that if he wins 40 per cent of the New Hampshire presidential primary vote, he will have beaten President Ford.

There is some precedent for the Reagan position. When Eugene McCarthy lost the New Hampshire primary with 42 per cent of the vote in 1968, he was perceived as the winner. Roughly the same thing happened with Sen. George McGovern in 1972. Neither won, but because both did far better than most politicians and the political press believed they would, second place became victory.

Political partisans and news commentators can and will interpret election results as they wish, but in view of the previous impact of the New Hampshire voting and of the buildup already underway for the 1976 primary on Feb. 24, it may be a good idea to set out some guideposts for the coming months.

The first is that only 21 of the 2,590 delegates to the Republican national convention will be chosen in New Hampshire. The impact is even smaller on the Democratic side — 17 of 3,008 delegates.



Ronald Reagan

To suggest that the New Hampshire winners, let alone the second place finishers, have an open road to the nomination of either party would be like describing the Mississippi River as a spring that rises in northern Minnesota. True, but not quite complete.

The second is that New Hampshire has only the first of 30 or more presidential primaries in 1976. It is worth noting that in 1968 there were only a dozen and not all of them were contested. Four years ago, there were 23 primaries, again not all contested.

In past presidential years, there were a limited number of opportunities to judge the voter appeal of the candidates before the nominating conventions. This time there ought to be a better opportunity to see how they do in every region and less reason to seize on one primary as pivotal.

Third, the candidacies are very different. The Republicans have an incumbent President who has never run for statewide, let alone national, office and a challenger who twice has been elected governor of the nation's largest and perhaps most diverse state.

The President's people probably could make an argument that Ford's advantage as an incumbent is balanced off by Reagan's bigger league campaign experience. That is at least as plausible as insisting that a 40 per cent showing wins a two-candidate contest.

Trying to judge the Democratic outcome on anything but the actual votes cast may be the high road to madness. Not all of the 10, 11 or more candidates for the nomination will be active in New Hampshire.

But it will be a crowded field and finding national significance in the division of fewer votes than decides the mayoral election of a medium-sized city would be, to reach for Yankee understatement, somewhat questionable.

None of this is meant to say that New Hampshire in 1976 will count for nothing. It will be the beginning, with a fur piece to go before the end.

The way we see it

Walker is a politician, too

In 1972, Daniel Walker ran for governor as the independent political candidate.

Today, it has become more evident that Walker is no different than most other politics-as-usual candidates, and if incidents like the one with his opponent over financial disclosure continue, Walker's cries of outrage against Mayor Daley and machine politics no longer will be listened to by the people of Illinois.

Walker has attacked regular Democratic Party gubernatorial candidate Michael Howlett on the issue of financial disclosure. At the same time, Walker continues to refuse to reveal the names of the persons who contributed to his 1972 campaign, even though Howlett has named the top 50 contributors to his campaign.

It is such Walker rhetoric being bandied about these days that raises the eyebrows of those who supported him because they thought he was different from the other politicians.

Some Northwest suburban Democratic committeemen contend that Walker, who persistently has opposed patronage, has used state jobs and the threat of political opposition to try to force the committeemen to support his reelection drive.

Walker supporters deny the charge. Regardless, these are the kinds of charges which continue to surface every week.

At about the time he was attacking the regular Democratic Party's slatemaking process, Walker was introducing a group of candidates for state office who look curiously like a "slate" made up by the governor.

As some people contend, it may be that these incidents are no more than the ordinary process of politics in which campaign half-truths are predictable.

However, there are still some who believe those tactics are not a necessary part of politics. Many of those people supported Walker in 1972 because of that belief.

Included in that group is the Independent Voters of Illinois organization, which supported Walker in the 1972 primary. Today, the group can no longer support the governor.

Another independent organization supporting Walker in 1972 — the Independent Precinct Organization of Chicago — decided against doing it again.

It is time that Walker and his campaign aides realize they cannot have it both ways. They cannot oppose political tactics while adopting many of those tactics themselves.

Keep your eyes on my opponents' disgusting behavior!

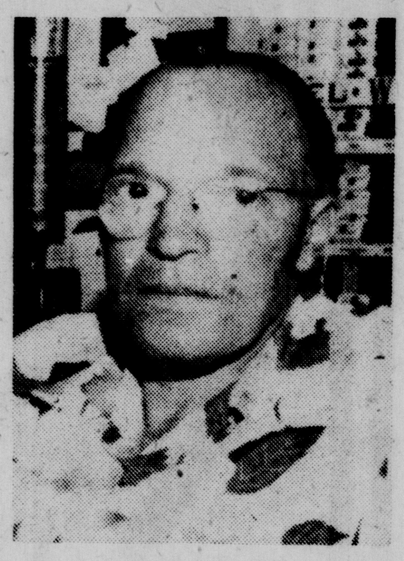
Joe's not dead, for his spirit lives on

Mike Klein's people



JOE BODOR

Theresa Bodor's eyes were swollen with tears and you could hear the old woman weep as she hunched forward, withered hands clutching a handkerchief to her face.

She battled hard against the sorrow but sometimes it overcame her.

A close frend would stop to pay respects, they'd embrace and the old woman had trouble concealing her mother's damaged love.

There is no good time to wish an eldest son one final mother's farewell. Not when you are young and strong. Not when you are 79 years old and have struggled all your life.

IT IS NO EASIER when there are three more sons, two daughters and 10 grandchildren who also need your love.

Theresa had worried that Joe's friends did not know.

But now they were filling the large room where his Knights of Columbus brothers regularly changed their honor guard, where long ago high school classmates grown into middle-aged men gathered to say good-bye.

These were Joe Bodor's friends. They thought he was a great little guy.

"Joe was a student in my class," an old man said. "He was one of the good ones."

THEY ALL SAID that. Stories differed, but on Monday evening, everyone said Joe had been a good man who always said hello and wanted to be friends.

Some knew him from bowling or golf leagues. Joe pursued both sports with zeal, despite physical deformities sustained at four years old when he tumbled off a roof.

But most people knew him from The Book Store in Arlington Heights where Joe tended the counter and cash register for more than 12 years.

Some even thought that Joe Bodor owned the store. You could always find him inside, making change for the afternoon newspaper, selling a package of cigarets, asking how you thought the Cubs would do next summer when it was only November and nobody really cared.

Joe was the bookstore.

People came through the old door with, "Hi, Joe!"

CHANCES ARE good that Joe would be wearing his blue plaid shirt. He'd say hello and continue most every conversation with something about the weather.

If the Bears had lost again, Joe also had thoughts on them. Most season ticket holders do.

There was sadness Monday morning at The Book Store. Joe had not worked regularly since November. But they knew Monday that he was never coming back again.

Joe passed away Saturday afternoon. Many were surprised to hear he was just 57 years old. Some thought he looked older. Joe had a hard life.

The woman in a gray coat purchased her morning paper and told Book Store coowner Jim Bell, "Gosh, he's been part of the village."

A MAN STOOD near the door, reading his paper. "Did you hear about Joe?" he asked another woman who had just come inside.

"No," she said pointblank.

"He passed away."

And so it went Monday morning. They came and left. Those who already knew about Joe were sorry. Those who had not known were shocked.

Some thought Joe was feeling better after a session in Northwest Community Hospital last month. Others had not even known Joe was seriously ill.

JOE BODOR was like that. He could have felt the greatest pain and still would have told you, "i'm fine, I'm just fine."

But he wasn't, not since last January when Joe developed a bad cough which never improved.

Joe required hospitalization in July at Northwest Community. His heart was not pumping properly.

Because a childhood accident caused upper body deformities, Joe's health problems were further complicated.

He left that hospital and soon was back at his counter in The Book Store. Joe worked all fall. But last month, he was seriously ill again and went back into Northwest Community.

IT WASN'T good. Joe nearly died. But just as suddenly, he felt better again and doctors released Joe before the holidays.

When you asked at The Book Store, they always said that Joe's health was improving. He'd return to work soon. It's what Joe believed; it's what he told them.

Last week, Joe figured it was about time to see how the old book shop was carrying on without him.

be seeing him again.

He told Jim Bell that as soon as the frigid weather broke, they'd

Joe spent a portion of Friday going over important personal papers with Katie, his sister who is 23 years younger.

SATURDAY MORNING held nothing special for Joe. He was no better or worse than other mornings.

Tremendous swelling in his legs had subsided enough that Joe walked downstairs from his bedroom to receive Holy Communion from Father John Mackin of Our Lady of the Wayside Church in Arlington Heights.

Then Joe settled into the rocking chair near the dining room in the Bodor home at 235 S. Dunton. It had been his home for 54 years since the Bodor family immigrated from Austria.

Joe spent the afternoon watching through the window which faced Dunton Street. About 3 o'clock, his mother brought Joe some orange juice.

It wasn't an hour later that Theresa and Joe's brother, Tony, found him slumped in the rocking chair. They called the paramedics, but nothing could be done. Joe died of congestive heart failure.

About 200 of Joe Bodor's friends filed past his casket Monday evening. They said Joe worked hard, never complained, wanted to be a regular guy and did not use his deformity to get ahead.

THEY REMEMBERED that Joe once bowled a 300 game and never missed a single night during his 30 years in the Arlington Twilight golf league.

Joe Bodor was a humble man of simple means, one who placed family and friends before himself.

They say the good ones never really die, they just pass on to some other place. Joe Bodor is still very much alive in the hearts of his family and friends.

And he's still at The Book Store. You might not see him, but you can feel Joe's presence. He's there behind the counter, near his cash register.

He'll always be there. After all, Joe was the bookstore.

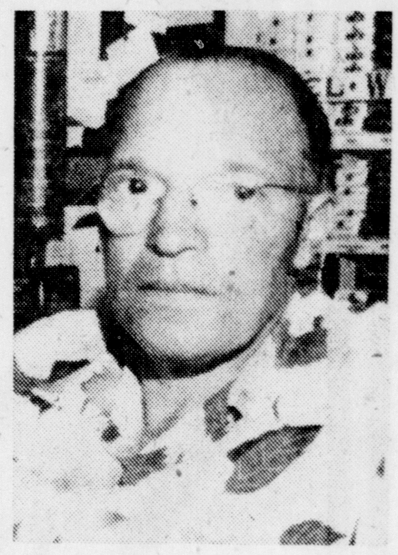
Joe's not dead, for his spirit lives on

Mike Klein's people



JOE BODOR

Theresa Bodor's eyes were swollen with tears and you could hear the old woman weep as she hunched forward, withered hands clutching a handkerchief to her face.

She battled hard against the sorrow but sometimes it overcame her.

A close frend would stop to pay respects, they'd embrace and the old woman had trouble concealing her mother's damaged love.

There is no good time to wish an eldest son one final mother's farewell. Not when you are young and strong. Not when you are 79 years old and have struggled all your life.

IT IS NO EASIER when there are three more sons, two daughters and 10 grandchildren who also need your love.

Theresa had worried that Joe's friends did not know.

But now they were filling the large room where his Knights of Columbus brothers regularly changed their honor guard, where long ago high school classmates grown into middle-aged men gathered to say good-bye.

These were Joe Bodor's friends. They thought he was a great little guy.

"Joe was a student in my class," an old man said. "He was one of the good ones."

THEY ALL SAID that. Stories differed, but on Monday evening, everyone said Joe had been a good man who always said hello and wanted to be friends.

Some knew him from bowling or golf leagues. Joe pursued both sports with zeal, despite physical deformities sustained at four years old when he tumbled off a roof.

But most people knew him from The Book Store in Arlington Heights where Joe tended the counter and cash register for more than 12 years.

Some even thought that Joe Bodor owned the store. You could always find him inside, making change for the afternoon newspaper, selling a package of cigarets, asking how you thought the Cubs would do next summer when it was only November and nobody really cared.

Joe was the bookstore.

People came through the old door with, "Hi, Joe!"

CHANCES ARE good that Joe would be wearing his blue plaid shirt. He'd say hello and continue most every conversation with something about the weather.

If the Bears had lost again, Joe also had thoughts on them. Most season ticket holders do.

There was sadness Monday morning at The Book Store. Joe had not worked regularly since November. But they knew Monday that he was never coming back again.

Joe passed away Saturday afternoon. Many were surprised to hear he was just 57 years old. Some thought he looked older. Joe had a hard life.

The woman in a gray coat purchased her morning paper and told Book Store coowner Jim Bell, "Gosh, he's been part of the village."

A MAN STOOD near the door, reading his paper. "Did you hear about Joe?" he asked another woman who had just come inside.

"No," she said pointblank.

"He passed away."

And so it went Monday morning. They came and left. Those who already knew about Joe were sorry. Those who had not known were shocked.

Some thought Joe was feeling better after a session in Northwest Community Hospital last month. Others had not even known Joe was seriously ill.

JOE BODOR was like that. He could have felt the greatest pain and still would have told you, "i'm fine, I'm just fine."

But he wasn't, not since last January when Joe developed a bad cough which never improved.

Joe required hospitalization in July at Northwest Community. His heart was not pumping properly.

Because a childhood accident caused upper body deformities, Joe's health problems were further complicated.

He left that hospital and soon was back at his counter in The Book Store. Joe worked all fall. But last month, he was seriously ill again and went back into Northwest Community.

IT WASN'T good. Joe nearly died. But just as suddenly, he felt better again and doctors released Joe before the holidays.

When you asked at The Book Store, they always said that Joe's health was improving. He'd return to work soon. It's what Joe believed; it's what he told them.

Last week, Joe figured it was about time to see how the old book shop was carrying on without him.

be seeing him again.

He told Jim Bell that as soon as the frigid weather broke, they'd

Joe spent a portion of Friday going over important personal papers with Katie, his sister who is 23 years younger.

SATURDAY MORNING held nothing special for Joe. He was no better or worse than other mornings.

Tremendous swelling in his legs had subsided enough that Joe walked downstairs from his bedroom to receive Holy Communion from Father John Mackin of Our Lady of the Wayside Church in Arlington Heights.

Then Joe settled into the rocking chair near the dining room in the Bodor home at 235 S. Dunton. It had been his home for 54 years since the Bodor family immigrated from Austria.

Joe spent the afternoon watching through the window which faced Dunton Street. About 3 o'clock, his mother brought Joe some orange juice.

It wasn't an hour later that Theresa and Joe's brother, Tony, found him slumped in the rocking chair. They called the paramedics, but nothing could be done. Joe died of congestive heart failure.

About 200 of Joe Bodor's friends filed past his casket Monday evening. They said Joe worked hard, never complained, wanted to be a regular guy and did not use his deformity to get ahead.

THEY REMEMBERED that Joe once bowled a 300 game and never missed a single night during his 30 years in the Arlington Twilight golf league.

Joe Bodor was a humble man of simple means, one who placed family and friends before himself.

They say the good ones never really die, they just pass on to some other place. Joe Bodor is still very much alive in the hearts of his family and friends.

And he's still at The Book Store. You might not see him, but you can feel Joe's presence. He's there behind the counter, near his cash register.

He'll always be there. After all, Joe was the bookstore.

Hales gets support from New Trier

by STEVE BROWN

One of the biggest Republican organizations in the 10th Congressional District threw its support to political newcomer Daniel B. Hales in his attempt to win the GOP nomination to run for Congress in the district.

Hales' supporters reported the New Trier Township Republican Organization gave their candidate, an attorney from Wilmette, a vote of nearly 3 to 1 over the two other candidates seeking the nomination, former Congressman Samuel H. Young of Glenview and State Sen. John Nimrod, R-Glenview.

In the New Trier organization voting, Hales received 87 votes to 27 for Young and 14 for Nimrod. Hales had been considered the favorite for the endorsement by some observers because David Brown, the township Republican committeeman, had unofficially been supporting him.

Hales' campaign manager, Robert Hurie, Tuesday said the candidate will work hard for endorsements in other townships in the district. He cited Northfield and Evanston townships as key areas.

Nimrod is the GOP committeeman in Niles Township and is expected to get the endorsement there. He may also attract support from the Maine Township Organization, which is led by Floyd Fulle, but observers in the district have predicted the Republican organization there is sharply divided and may not be able to agree on an endorsement in the congressional race.

Only Northfield Township Republican Committeeman William Bringham has indicated he will support Young in his comeback try. The winner of the March 16 primary will face U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, in the November election.

Howlett backs full funding

Sec. of State Michael Howlett, the regular Democratic Party's candidate for governor, Tuesday told a group in Moline he will support full funding of the state school aid formula.

Howlett's position put him in direct opposition with Gov. Daniel Walker who vetoed $112 million in state school aid funds late last year.

Howlett blasted Walker for the vetoes.

In a speech prepared for the Moline appearance, Howlett criticized Walker and said the governor promised full funding of the school aid formula and then called for a cutback.

Howlett said the 1970 Illinois Constitution makes the state the primary source for financing public education.

"When I am governor, we will meet that responsibility, we will support the resource equalizer formula which the legislature voted into law in 1973," he said.

Hartigan criticized by Alter

Joanne Alter, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, Tuesday held a series of news conferences around the state criticizing Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan for not taking a stand on state legislature reform.

She also endorsed the Illinois Political Honesty Initiative, which is gathering signatures in an effort to get three constitutional amendments on the ballot next November.

She charged that during his term as lieutenant governor, Hartigan has not attempted to use his office to make any reforms in the General Assembly.

Mohr named campaign chief

State Sen. William Harris, R-Pontiac, announced he has appointed a colleague, State Sen. Howard Mohr, R-Forest Park, to coordinate his Cook County campaign for secretary of state.

Harris has served as Republican minority leader in the Senate, Mohr, who is retiring from the Senate at the end of the year, has served as the assistant minority leader.

Before the Democrats won control of the General Assembly in 1974, Harris served as president of the Illinois Senate.

Hales gets support from New Trier

by STEVE BROWN

One of the biggest Republican organizations in the 10th Congressional District threw its support to political newcomer Daniel B. Hales in his attempt to win the GOP nomination to run for Congress in the district.

Hales' supporters reported the New Trier Township Republican Organization gave their candidate, an attorney from Wilmette, a vote of nearly 3 to 1 over the two other candidates seeking the nomination, former Congressman Samuel H. Young of Glenview and State Sen. John Nimrod, R-Glenview.

In the New Trier organization voting, Hales received 87 votes to 27 for Young and 14 for Nimrod. Hales had been considered the favorite for the endorsement by some observers because David Brown, the township Republican committeeman, had unofficially been supporting him.

Hales' campaign manager, Robert Hurie, Tuesday said the candidate will work hard for endorsements in other townships in the district. He cited Northfield and Evanston townships as key areas.

Nimrod is the GOP committeeman in Niles Township and is expected to get the endorsement there. He may also attract support from the Maine Township Organization, which is led by Floyd Fulle, but observers in the district have predicted the Republican organization there is sharply divided and may not be able to agree on an endorsement in the congressional race.

Only Northfield Township Republican Committeeman William Bringham has indicated he will support Young in his comeback try. The winner of the March 16 primary will face U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, in the November election.

Howlett backs full funding

Sec. of State Michael Howlett, the regular Democratic Party's candidate for governor, Tuesday told a group in Moline he will support full funding of the state school aid formula.

Howlett's position put him in direct opposition with Gov. Daniel Walker who vetoed $112 million in state school aid funds late last year.

Howlett blasted Walker for the vetoes.

In a speech prepared for the Moline appearance, Howlett criticized Walker and said the governor promised full funding of the school aid formula and then called for a cutback.

Howlett said the 1970 Illinois Constitution makes the state the primary source for financing public education.

"When I am governor, we will meet that responsibility, we will support the resource equalizer formula which the legislature voted into law in 1973," he said.

Hartigan criticized by Alter

Joanne Alter, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, Tuesday held a series of news conferences around the state criticizing Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan for not taking a stand on state legislature reform.

She also endorsed the Illinois Political Honesty Initiative, which is gathering signatures in an effort to get three constitutional amendments on the ballot next November.

She charged that during his term as lieutenant governor, Hartigan has not attempted to use his office to make any reforms in the General Assembly.

Mohr named campaign chief

State Sen. William Harris, R-Pontiac, announced he has appointed a colleague, State Sen. Howard Mohr, R-Forest Park, to coordinate his Cook County campaign for secretary of state.

Harris has served as Republican minority leader in the Senate, Mohr, who is retiring from the Senate at the end of the year, has served as the assistant minority leader.

Before the Democrats won control of the General Assembly in 1974, Harris served as president of the Illinois Senate.

SHE STARTED LATER and it took her longer than most who pursue higher education, but Barbara Farr is now fast approaching the goal toward which she's been working the past 13 years, a doctoral degree and, hopefully, teaching at the college level.

Barbara Storm Farr

In love with learning

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Barbara Storm Farr started late, sampled . . . and "got hooked" on academia. "I had to do it!" she exclaimed, referring to 13 years of tenacious study.

Delaying college work until she was 36, Mrs. Farr will be defending her doctoral dissertation this month. She plans to expand her theme, "Development and Impact of Right Wing Politics in Great Britain, 1903-1932," into a book. She's already written articles and reviews for scholastic journals.

To research her dissertation, Barbara traveled to England. She stayed several months each time studying on her own in London. "It was a great adventure, exciting. I loved it!" she recalled her solo trips abroad.

BARBARA'S LOVE affair with education began when, satisfied with her efforts in Wheeling community development, she enrolled part-time at Mayfair Junior College in Chicago. She always had the desire to attend college, and finally just did it, she said. Husband William, manager of corporate design at Montgomery Ward's in Chicago, and son Jeffrey, now 22, cooperated in her endeavor.

Slipping naturally into the academic life, Mrs. Farr attended classes full-time in her second semester. She graduated with honors from Mayfair, and also a two year scholarship to Roosevelt University.

At Roosevelt, Barbara majored in history, aiming for college teaching. With some interruptions, one breaking a hip, she continued her education, earning a bachelor's at Roosevelt and a master's and a doctorate at University of Illinois Circle Campus in Chicago.

NOW A LONG-TIME goal to be a college professor is in sight for Barbara. "But the tragic part of my broken hip and that long recuperation, is that job prospects are dimmer than before," she mused. And Barbara is anxious to make use of her education, and to put her teaching ideas to work.

"Memorizing all those dates" won't be part of Mrs. Farr's teaching technique. First she wants students to gain an understanding of history. Learning to analyze, not to memorize, is what's important, she said.

"Students first must learn to understand a subject, assemble facts, select what is important, then make a decision. That is what you do on any job."

Reassessing the value of college education is part of a current trend. Mrs. Farr sees as important going to school to build skills for employment. But in her mind, education is not just learning job skills. As a professor, she will steer students to expand their personalities, and to understand how they have reached the present point in history.

"IT'S IMPORTANT to have a basis in history to understand global history, for example. History is a living part of our existence," she explained earnestly.

Mrs. Farr is not of the opinion that history repeats itself. "History does not repeat itself. Time and circumstances and forces are always different. No two situations are always alike." As a college teacher, her goal would be to arouse enthusiastic interest for modern Britain and European history among students, she said.

But as enthusiastic as she herself is about the studious life, Mrs. Farr doesn't see it as a pat answer for everyone. For women, especially in these changing times, it's what makes a woman feel good about herself that counts. "If a woman lacks self-esteem, she should find a way to get it," she said firmly.

Much in favor of equal rights for women, Barbara thinks it basic that women have equal status in employment, and that legal rights are recognized at the federal level. "But psychological acceptance is very important," she stressed.

BEFORE TACKLING college studies, Mrs. Farr helped to develop community facilities in Wheeling as a way of broadening her own sense of worth. A member in Wheeling Junior Woman's Club and related groups, she has been on community council, and now sits on Dist. 21 Board of Education,

She was one of four women to attend a national convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs the year she presided over the Wheeling club. That club won first in state for community development, which included helping to build a library, a pool and otherwise expand park districts. When she felt community needs were established, Mrs. Farr tried something else she had always wanted to do: college.

Now that she has taught history in college, and has a Ph.D. in hand, she sees good things ahead.

"Women shouldn't be concerned about how old they are. Changes are made by people becoming involved," said Mrs. Farr, who has resided in Wheeling for 20 years, grew up in Mount Prospect, and graduated from Arlington High School.

Answers to questions on husband's insurance

Dear Attorney Martoccio,

I just figured you might be able to help answer some questions for me and would appreciate it very much if you did. I have a $5 bet riding on the answers.

1) Can a wife insure her husband's life and make herself the beneficiary?

2) If her husband is in debt when he dies, can his creditors collect from the money she receives from the life insurance?

3) If my husband takes out insurance, can he name both me and the children as beneficiaries?

4) If so, can he then change it if he wishes to at at a later date?

Thank you for your time and attention. — F.T.

Dear F.T.

I'm curious. You don't say with whom you have the bet or the answers you gave that might prove you are right or wrong. I have the feeling that whatever the reason for the bet, you already know the answers but that you are trying to find a way of convincing your husband that he should have life insurance for you and the children. Am I right?

IF I AM, I think you are wise in your insistence, but I'm wondering if your method of "betting" is the best way to get around your husband. I hope I might suggest that you try to talk him into a conference with a trusted insurance company or individual who sells insurance and let that person tell him about the advantages of life insurance as a financial investment.

1. What you are referring to here is the question of what is called "insurable interest." It's true, not everyone has the right to insure another person's life. The test to determine whether a person has an insurable interest is this: Has the insurer a greater interest in seeing that the insured stays alive, or is it more to the advantage of the insurer that the insured not be alive?

The legal assumption is that a wife has more to gain if her husband lives than if he were dead and therefore she has the right to take out insurance on his life.

WHILE WE'RE on the subject of insurable interest, let me point out several others.

You may insure a person who owes you money, but only to the amount that the person owes you. This ensures that you will be paid what's owed to you.

An employer has the right to insure those employes who are important to his business, and vice versa.

Also, partners have the right to insure each other.

Parents may insure their children. Children may also insure their parents, but the amount frequently is limited by law in both instances. If a child wishes to take out insurance on a parent, he or she must first receive the permission of the parent to do so.

CONSENT IS NOT necessary if a husband wishes to insure a wife, and the wife insures the husband. The reasoning is that the insurable interest is based on love and affection and reduces the likelihood of the beneficiary's actions in bringing about the death of the loved one.

(Note also that the insurable interest ends if a couple obtains a divorce, but the spouse does not automatically cease to be the beneficiary. It would be necessary to make the change to achieve that purpose.)

2. If your husband is in debt when he dies, his creditors do not have a right to collect money from the life insurance policy. (This doesn't mean that they can't get it from his other assets.) It is one reason why many husbands feel that life insurance is necessary to protect their children and spouse after they have passed on. One qualification however: The insurance policy must be made out to the beneficiaries and not to the estate. If it were made out to the estate, the creditors could make a claim against the insurance proceeds.

3. YES, A husband may, if he wishes, name his wife and children as beneficiaries of his insurance and may provide for the division in the way he sees fit.

4. In most states, the insured may change the beneficiary. But this is not true in states that have community property laws (Illinois is not a community property state.) In community property states, the insured's spouse is required to consent to the change if the couple used their joint funds to pay for the policy.

By the way, your husband may make the choice of beneficiary irrevocable, if you wish to feel more secure.

Heart, lung researchers searching for answers

by AL ROSSITER JR.

(Last of three parts)

The government is spending $256 million to help answer one of the biggest questions affecting the health of Americans today — is there any way to halt the nation's heart disease epidemic?

It is one of the most elusive problems in medicine.

The leads are substantial and they point to high cholesterol levels in the blood, cigarette smoking and high blood pressure. Four out of five heart attack victims have these factors working against them.

What is lacking is proof that reducing cholesterol, stopping smoking and lowering blood pressure can prevent or at least reduce the incidence of heart attacks in the United States.

Cholesterol is perhaps of greatest concern because there is evidence that hardening of the arteries, or atherosclerosis, begins in childhood when diet would seem to be the most important of the known risk factors.

FOR EXAMPLE battlefield autopsies of servicemen killed in Korea at an average age of 22 showed that 77 per cent had some buildup of fats on the linings of their arteries. Fifteen per cent had blood vessels narrowed by half the normal size. Similar findings came from Vietnam war studies.

But government health officials feel that before they can recommend low-cholesterol, low-fat diets to the general public, there must be proof such diets will help ward off heart disease.

One recent study by Dr. Ivan D. Frantz at the University of Minnesota produced inconclusive results.

Using 9,500 patients over age 21 at seven state hospitals, he put half on cholesterol-lowering diets and half on regular diets. For the whole group, the low-cholesterol diet produced no benefit in reducing heart disease risk, but Frantz said it did seem to help men under age 50.

"WE DIDN'T get any difference at all in the women under 50 and that's hard for me to explain," he said.

Frantz said he personally believes that if cholesterol is maintained at low levels from childhood on, the risk of heart disease would be reduced.

It is known that women have fewer heart attacks and strokes than men. Dr. William B. Kannel, director of a long-term heart disease study in Framingham, Mass., told the American Heart Association in November the study showed men developed cardiovascular disease at nearly triple the rate of women. He suggested differences in hormones might be responsible.

The government's National Heart and Lung Institute is taking a different approach to find some answers.

IT HAS THREE major, nationwide trials under way to see if a reduction of cholesterol in the blood, a halt to smoking and lowering blood pressure will reduce heart attack rates. The combined studies are expected to cost $256 million by the time they are finished in the early 1980s.

The cholesterol controversy

One seven-year effort, which began a year ago at a dozen clinics, concentrates solely on cholesterol. This trial involves up to 4,000 men aged 35 through 59 who have abnormally high cholesterol levels in their blood yet show no signs of heart disease.

Half these men are receiving a cholesterol-lowering diet and a dummy drug. The other half receives the diet plus a cholesterol-lowering drug called cholestyramine. The diet is expected to lower cholesterol levels by 6 to 7 per cent and the drug is expected to produce 20 to 25 per cent reductions.

The subjects will receive this treatment for up to seven years to see if the diet plus drug group has fewer heart attacks than the diet-only group For ethical reasons, there is no high cholesterol group not receiving any treatment.

NEVERTHELESS, Dr. Basil Rifkind, the project director, believes if it is convincingly shown that those with lower cholesterol fare better, it would mean that dietary limitations of cholesterol also would be of benefit.

The problem with such a study is that even though heart attacks are the major killer of men, there still is only one such event per 100 men of middle age per year. This means that large numbers must be studied to get significant results. And to find 3,500 middle-aged men with high cholesterol, 350,000 must be tested.

"It is a logistic and scientific effort of incredible magnitude," Rifkind said.

Another consideration too, he said, is that with drug therapy "you always pay a price. There is no drug that has been discovered that is free of some side effects or toxic effects. This may not matter to any extent when you are treating somebody for five days with a sore throat, but if these drugs are shown to be of basic value in preventing heart disease, you will be giving them to individuals for many years."

THE SECOND BIG trial directed by NHLI involves 12,000 middle-aged men who are above-average heart attack risks because of a combination of high cholesterol levels, smoking and high blood pressure.

Half are being referred to their personal doctor for usual medical care and half are entering a program conducted by 20 medical centers aimed at modifying their habits to lower cholesterol, stop smoking and lower blood pressure. The goal again is to see if preventive measures can be taken to lower heart attack rates.

In addition, the NHLI is midway through a five-year trial involving 11,000 patients to see if lowering blood pressure alone reduces the rate of heart disease.

Although heart disease prevention is the goal of all three trials, Rifkind said there is hope that use of the cholesterol-lowering drug might actually reverse some earlier stages of atherosclerosis.

An encouraging step in this direction has been taken by a University of Chicago research team led by Dr. Robert W. Wissler. He reported at the heart association meeting that use of cholestyramine in monkeys reduced fatty deposits in the principal artery leading from the heart by about five-sixths.

IT WAS emphasized, however, that the research applied only to new fatty deposits formed by very high cholesterol diets.

"It's really trying for the moon to hope that one could influence the extremer versions of this calcified, fibrous, scarred tissue lining arteries," Rifkind said. "You're not going to bring that back to normal."

Another avenue of study of potential promise has turned up in a cooperative Soviet-American heart disease research effort. The joint studies recently discovered a biochemical difference in some Russian men that may possibly have a role in protecting

Cholesterol is perhaps of greatest concern because there is evidence that hardening of the arteries, or atherosclerosis, begins in childhood when diet would seem to be the most important of the known risk factors.

FOR EXAMPLE battlefield autopsies of servicemen killed in Korea at an average age of 22 showed that 77 per cent had some buildup of fats on the linings of their arteries. Fifteen per cent had blood vessels narrowed by half the normal size. Similar findings came from Vietnam war studies.

But government health officials feel that before they can recommend low-cholesterol, low-fat diets to the general public, there must be proof such diets will help ward off heart disease.

One recent study by Dr. Ivan D. Frantz at the University of Minnesota produced inconclusive results.

Using 9,500 patients over age 21 at seven state hospitals, he put half on cholesterol-lowering diets and half on regular diets. For the whole group, the low-cholesterol diet produced no benefit in reducing heart disease risk, but Frantz said it did seem to help men under age 50.

"WE DIDN'T get any difference at all in the women under 50 and that's hard for me to explain," he said.

Frantz said he personally believes that if cholesterol is maintained at low levels from childhood on, the risk of heart disease would be reduced.

It is known that women have fewer heart attacks and strokes than men. Dr. William B. Kannel, director of a long-term heart disease study in Framingham, Mass., told the American Heart Association in November the study showed men developed cardiovascular disease at nearly triple the rate of women. He suggested differences in hormones might be responsible.

The government's National Heart and Lung Institute is taking a different approach to find some answers.

IT HAS THREE major, nationwide trials under way to see if a reduction of cholesterol in the blood, a halt to smoking and lowering blood pressure will reduce heart attack rates. The combined studies are expected to cost $256 million by the time they are finished in the early 1980s.

The cholesterol controversy

One seven-year effort, which began a year ago at a dozen clinics, concentrates solely on cholesterol. This trial involves up to 4,000 men aged 35 through 59 who have abnormally high cholesterol levels in their blood yet show no signs of heart disease.

Half these men are receiving a cholesterol-lowering diet and a dummy drug. The other half receives the diet plus a cholesterol-lowering drug called cholestyramine. The diet is expected to lower cholesterol levels by 6 to 7 per cent and the drug is expected to produce 20 to 25 per cent reductions.

The subjects will receive this treatment for up to seven years to see if the diet plus drug group has fewer heart attacks than the diet-only group For ethical reasons, there is no high cholesterol group not receiving any treatment.

NEVERTHELESS, Dr. Basil Rifkind, the project director, believes if it is convincingly shown that those with lower cholesterol fare better, it would mean that dietary limitations of cholesterol also would be of benefit.

The problem with such a study is that even though heart attacks are the major killer of men, there still is only one such event per 100 men of middle age per year. This means that large numbers must be studied to get significant results. And to find 3,500 middle-aged men with high cholesterol, 350,000 must be tested.

"It is a logistic and scientific effort of incredible magnitude," Rifkind said.

Another consideration too, he said, is that with drug therapy "you always pay a price. There is no drug that has been discovered that is free of some side effects or toxic effects. This may not matter to any extent when you are treating somebody for five days with a sore throat, but if these drugs are shown to be of basic value in preventing heart disease, you will be giving them to individuals for many years."

THE SECOND BIG trial directed by NHLI involves 12,000 middle-aged men who are above-average heart attack risks because of a combination of high cholesterol levels, smoking and high blood pressure.

Half are being referred to their personal doctor for usual medical care and half are entering a program conducted by 20 medical centers aimed at modifying their habits to lower cholesterol, stop smoking and lower blood pressure. The goal again is to see if preventive measures can be taken to lower heart attack rates.

In addition, the NHLI is midway through a five-year trial involving 11,000 patients to see if lowering blood pressure alone reduces the rate of heart disease.

Although heart disease prevention is the goal of all three trials, Rifkind said there is hope that use of the cholesterol-lowering drug might actually reverse some earlier stages of atherosclerosis.

An encouraging step in this direction has been taken by a University of Chicago research team led by Dr. Robert W. Wissler. He reported at the heart association meeting that use of cholestyramine in monkeys reduced fatty deposits in the principal artery leading from the heart by about five-sixths.

IT WAS emphasized, however, that the research applied only to new fatty deposits formed by very high cholesterol diets.

"It's really trying for the moon to hope that one could influence the extremer versions of this calcified, fibrous, scarred tissue lining arteries," Rifkind said. "You're not going to bring that back to normal."

Another avenue of study of potential promise has turned up in a cooperative Soviet-American heart disease research effort. The joint studies recently discovered a biochemical difference in some Russian men that may possibly have a role in protecting

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Low-fat diet can cut cholesterol

I have been on a low fat diet for over a year. My cholesterol was 337 and I brought it down to 294, 254 and finally 245. When I ask what level should I aim for my doctor just says I'm doing fine. What is the normal level?

I am 60 years old and in good health. I have read different articles on high cholesterol that say that it cannot be dissolved once it's in the arteries. Is that true? The triglyceride level is normal. I have brought my weight down to 143 from 163 pounds. I would like to know if I am doing all right and what is normal.

In general the risk of having a heart attack or other complications from fatty-cholesterol deposits increases as the level of cholesterol increases and decreases as the level decreases. Different laboratory procedures also yield different results.

Depending on the type of test done, once your cholesterol level is around 220 or less your level is low enough that it becomes a less important factor.

I wanted to include your letter in the column for another reason. Your case is a good example of how a low fat diet works. You can debate the value of a low fat low cholesterol diet in some instances for the general population, but there is very little doubt about its value in decreasing the cholesterol level in people who have high levels to begin with. Most physicians who have really tried this approach and who succeed in getting their patients to lose unhealthy pounds have observed such changes.

Your results sound like you are moving in the right direction and as you continue to lose extra pounds, the results will probably be even better. While you are about it, gradually get rid of all your excess pounds so you don't have any significant amount of fat on your body.

THOSE ARTICLES you have read about not being able to dissolve the cholesterol in your arteries once it is there are completely wrong. A well planned study on monkeys put on a high-fat high-cholesterol diet and then put back on a low calorie monkey diet showed that the changes disappeared.

From worldwide studies we know that the deposits disappear. Prisoners of war in World War II on calorie restricted low-fat diets who died and were examined had arteries as clean as a 17-year-old girl. Heart disease nearly disappeared in occupied countries of Europe and in Germany at the close and after the war. It was common before the war and is now even more common. The limited food intake results in significant changes in the fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries.

Of course you can't reverse the actual muscle damage that might occur to the heart if you have had a heart attack or the brain damage from a stroke, but you can accomplish a lot in the way of cleaning out your arteries with a good treatment program.

A lot of people don't get the results they should get because they don't go far enough. When you need to lose 40 pounds and lose only 10 you can't expect miracles.

Homemade onion soup a taste adventure

Dear Dorothy: Can't get over the French onion soup I had at a Cherry Hill, N.J., restaurant. It was thick, with cheese on top, and apparently was broiled for a few minutes before serving. Do you happen to have such a recipe?—Margaret S. Meyer

The men in this family fancy themselves in the kitchen and our son, Steve, actually is good. Those who have had his onion soup cheer. He starts with a stick of margarine in a four-quart sauce pot. When it starts sizzling gently, he adds four very large (or eight medium) onions, which he has sliced very thin and separated into rings. These cook at very low heat, stirred constantly until soft and golden brown. Then comes one heaping tablespoon of flour and one tablespoon of Dijon-type mustard.

This is temporarily set aside while nine packets of powdered beef bouillon are added to 48 ounces of water. Careful stirring makes all this dissolve without lumps. This is then added gradually to the onion mixture, brought to a boil, then allowed to simmer for 30 minutes.

At serving time, one thinly sliced piece of toasted French bread is put into a soup crock, which is filled with soup and lots of onions, and grated cheese dusted heavily over the top. Each bowl is put into the oven until the cheese gets bubbly. Hope this matches the taste adventure you had.

Dear Dorothy: Here's a good tip. I always keep colorless nail polish on hand. When the flap on an envelope won't stay stuck, a dab or two of the polish takes care of it. Not only is there no smudge, the envelope can't be steamed open.—Doris Tate

Orchid Society sets 2-day show

The Illinois Orchid Society will present its annual orchid show Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 24 and 25, at the Lincoln Park Conservatory of the Chicago Park District.

Orchid plants carrying thousands of blooms will be displayed in natural settings, ranging from the familiar cattleyas to rare and exotic species. There will also be educational and other orchid-related exhibits.

Exhibits will be the work of individuals, and orchid societies from several midwestern states, as well as some commercial growers.

WHEN OPENED TO the public, the plants and exhibits already will have been judged by the American Orchid Society and ribbons and special awards will be displayed in the exhibits for added interest.

Show officials recommend Saturday or Sunday morning attendance to avoid excessive crowding on Sunday afternoon as in previous years. Hours will be 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is no admission change.

Cathy Rasmussen—Lawrence Pauls

A Christmastime wedding with traditional green and red accents united Cathy Rasmussen of Arlington Heights and Lawrence Pauls of Addison. They chose Dec. 27 for the 4:30 p.m. ceremony in St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

Cathy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Rasmussen Jr., had her sister, Pamela, as maid of honor and two friends, Caryn Geisler, Chicago, and Nancy Larsen, Des Plaines, as bridesmaids. The girls wore forest green halter dresses with hooded jackets and carried white mums and holly tied with red velvet ribbon.

Larry is the son of Robert Pauls and Mrs. Rosemary Pauls, both of Addison. His brother, Robert, was best man and another brother, Chris, ushered along with Richard Rafdahl, Berkeley, Ill.

AS SHE CAME down the aisle for the candlelight ceremony, Cathy wore a white satin gown trimmed with beaded lace and a chapel-length veil attached to a satin headpiece. Her bouquet was of fuji mums, stephanotis and holly.

A reception with dinner and dancing at the Arlington Heights VFW Hall followed for 140 guests. The newlyweds then left for a week's honeymoon at Lake Geneva.

They are making their home in Bensenville while Cathy works part time at Graceland Nursing Home, Des Plaines, and Larry part time for United Parcel Service, Franklin Park. Both attend school, the bride at Elmhurst College and the groom at the University of Illinois Circle Campus. She is a graduate of Hersey High School. Larry graduated from Addision Trail High.

Child abuse play offered by NCJW

"The Inner Tiger," a play dealing with child abuse, will be presented at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 20, by West Valley Section of the National Council of Jewish Women. The group, which includes members from Des Plaines, will be presenting the play in Northwest Suburban Congregation, 7800 Lyons, Morton Grove.

Produced and published by a division of Family Service Association of America, the play will star West Valley's amateur thespians. The evening will also include a discussion about child welfare led by Allen Yasgur, executive director of Shelter, Inc., an agency that deals with abused, neglected, dependent and runaway children.

The public is invited. Information 272-2405.

Weddings

Annette·Kay Schroeder—Frank E. Robeck Jr.

In a Dec. 20 service that took place in Southminster United Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights, Annette Kay Schroeder, daughter of former area residents Mr. and Mrss. H. E. Schroeder of Bella Vista, Ark., became the bride of Frank Emil Robek Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Robek, Palatine.

The double ring service at 12:30 p.m. was followed by a reception at Lancer's Steak House after which the newlyweds honeymooned at the Hyatt Regency, Chicago.

Both graduates of Palatine High, Annette went on to become a registered nurse and Frank spent four years in the Navy. They are now making their home in Rogers, Ark.

FOR HER WEDDING Annette chose a white organza gown trimmed in seed pearls, a picture hat trimmed in seed pearls and tulle and an elbow-length veil. She carried white roses, stephanotis and tangerine carnations.

The groom's sister, Kathy, was maid of honor wearing a forest green gown. Bridesmaid was Kathy Carr, Buffalo Grove, who was in rust. Both carried baby wood roses, tangerine carnations and orange roses.

Best man was Bob Walker, Palatine, and ushers were the bride's brothers, Art of Tinley Park and Bob of Arlington Heights.

Award aids graduate work

Alpha Xi Delta is again offering a $2,500 graduate fellowship for advanced study in social service. An applicant must be a graduate of an accredited college or university with a grade average of B or above, have applied or been accepted for admission to a graduate school of social work and be interested in pursuing a career with children or youth to combat delinquency in the United States. Membership in a Greek organization is not a consideration.

Combating juvenile delinquency has been Alpha Xi Delta's national philanthropic goal since 1958 and its graduate fellowship has been awarded annually since then.

Interested persons may obtain applications from Mrs. William Myers of Des Plaines, 824-4861. Application deadline is Feb. 15.

Nurses' club offers $500 scholarship

Applications are available through Feb. 15 for the Jane Manock Memorial Scholarship offered by Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates Nurses Club.

The $500 scholarship has been awarded annually since 1964 to a Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates or Schaumburg Township resident who plans to enter or continue her nursing education in an accredited program.

Interested persons may contact Mrs. Joseph Spaulding, 529-9815, or local high school counselors.

Women to learn how automobile operates

A new class will be offered at Greenerfields Unlimited, Northfield, during the winter quarter.

"The Auto Mystique — Things My Father Never Told Me About My Car" is a six-week course for women designed to explain the mysteries of how an automobile operates. Classes will be held at Stavin Oldsmobile, Highland Park, Thursday evenings beginning Jan. 29. The fee is $35.

Sessions will cover the basics of the auto, with films and filmstrips added to visually help the students. Information is available at 446-0525.

Award aids graduate work

Alpha Xi Delta is again offering a $2,500 graduate fellowship for advanced study in social service. An applicant must be a graduate of an accredited college or university with a grade average of B or above, have applied or been accepted for admission to a graduate school of social work and be interested in pursuing a career with children or youth to combat delinquency in the United States. Membership in a Greek organization is not a consideration.

Combating juvenile delinquency has been Alpha Xi Delta's national philanthropic goal since 1958 and its graduate fellowship has been awarded annually since then.

Interested persons may obtain applications from Mrs. William Myers of Des Plaines, 824-4861. Application deadline is Feb. 15.

Nurses' club offers $500 scholarship

Applications are available through Feb. 15 for the Jane Manock Memorial Scholarship offered by Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates Nurses Club.

The $500 scholarship has been awarded annually since 1964 to a Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates or Schaumburg Township resident who plans to enter or continue her nursing education in an accredited program.

Interested persons may contact Mrs. Joseph Spaulding, 529-9815, or local high school counselors.

Sessions will cover the basics of the auto, with films and filmstrips added to visually help the students. Information is available at 446-0525.

Cathy Rasmussen–Lawrence Pauls

A Christmastime wedding with traditional green and red accents united Cathy Rasmussen of Arlington Heights and Lawrence Pauls of Addison. They chose Dec. 27 for the 4:30 p.m. ceremony in St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

Cathy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Rasmussen Jr., had her sister, Pamela, as maid of honor and two friends, Caryn Geisler, Chicago, and Nancy Larsen, Des Plaines, as bridesmaids. The girls wore forest green halter dresses with hooded jackets and carried white mums and holly tied with red velvet ribbon.

Larry is the son of Robert Pauls and Mrs. Rosemary Pauls, both of Addison. His brother, Robert, was best man and another brother, Chris, ushered along with Richard Rafdahl, Berkeley, Ill.

AS SHE CAME down the aisle for the candlelight ceremony, Cathy wore a white satin gown trimmed with beaded lace and a chapel-length veil attached to a satin headpiece. Her bouquet was of fuji mums, stephanotis and holly.

A reception with dinner and dancing at the Arlington Heights VFW Hall followed for 140 guests. The newlyweds then left for a week's honeymoon at Lake Geneva.

They are making their home in Bensenville while Cathy works part time at Graceland Nursing Home, Des Plaines, and Larry part time for United Parcel Service, Franklin Park. Both attend school, the bride at Elmhurst College and the groom at the University of Illinois Circle Campus. She is a graduate of Hersey High School. Larry graduated from Addision Trail High.

Weddings

Annette Kay Schroeder – Frank E. Robeck Jr.

In a Dec. 20 service that took place in Southminster United Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights, Annette Kay Schroeder, daughter of former area residents Mr. and Mrss. H. E. Schroeder of Bella Vista, Ark., became the bride of Frank Emil Robek Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Robek, Palatine.

The double ring service at 12:30 p.m. was followed by a reception at Lancer's Steak House after which the newlyweds honeymooned at the Hyatt Regency, Chicago.

Both graduates of Palatine High, Annette went on to become a registered nurse and Frank spent four years in the Navy. They are now making their home in Rogers, Ark.

FOR HER WEDDING Annette chose a white organza gown trimmed in seed pearls, a picture hat trimmed in seed pearls and tulle and an elbow-length veil. She carried white roses, stephanotis and tangerine carnations.

The groom's sister, Kathy, was maid of honor wearing a forest green gown. Bridesmaid was Kathy Carr, Buffalo Grove, who was in rust. Both carried baby wood roses, tangerine carnations and orange roses.

Best man was Bob Walker, Palatine, and ushers were the bride's brothers, Art of Tinley Park and Bob of Arlington Heights.

Child abuse play offered by NCJW

"The Inner Tiger," a play dealing with child abuse, will be presented at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 20, by West Valley Section of the National Council of Jewish Women. The group, which includes members from Des Plaines, will be presenting the play in Northwest Suburban Congregation, 7800 Lyons, Morton Grove.

Produced and published by a division of Family Service Association of America, the play will star West Valley's amateur thespians. The evening will also include a discussion about child welfare led by Allen Yasgur, executive director of Shelter, Inc., an agency that deals with abused, neglected, dependent and runaway children.

The public is invited. Information 272-2405.

Hope and horticulture

Speaking of...
by Kay Marsh

What do you like to read to forget about winter?

Maybe you curl up with tropical travel guides, or opt for escape via mysteries. But my best ticket to summer is a browsing trip through a seed catalog.

Any seed catalog will do. However, the one I keep handy as a chill-chaser comes from Burpee Seeds, which proudly boasts of "celebrating our 100th anniversary." That means that for a whole century of winters the snow-bound housewife has been escaping through the magic carpet of seed advertising.

There's a promise of plenty on every page, a harvest of hope in every paragraph. And no matter how many times we've been disappointed we somehow know in our hearts that THIS is the year one 40 cent packet of seeds is going to blossom miraculously into a veritable cornucopia of beautifully blushing tomatoes.

IF THIS IS MY year, what's going to blossom is the new Burpee Big Girl Hybrid VF, billed as "Now Big Boy Giant Hybrid Tomato Has A Big Sister." There may or may not be sexist overtones here, but Big Girl promises "built-in resistance to Fusarium and Verticillium wilts." I'm not sure what these wilts are, but they just may be why my tomatoes never did so well before.

I also plan to try the new Burpee's Best Whites Marigold. The company paid $10,000 for the seeds to grow the first white marigold, making this "the costliest flower in the world."

Actually, with apologies to this paper's garden experts, a rose is a rose is a rose as far as I'm concerned. And hope springs anew with every catalog.

OF COURSE, THE Burpee catalog offers more than seeds. In fact, it promises "everything for the garden," and "everything" ranges down from a $685 greenhouse to half a pint of ladybugs (to control insects) at $7.50.

For that matter, there are even a few items not specifically for the garden: a reprint of the company's 1888 catalog, for instance; centennial place mats and trays; even a fascinating Planting Clock for $49.95.

Horticulture, however, is the main stay of the business. You can order trees, shrubs and hedges for the largest estate, or a few plants for an apartment window box. There's even a "Brag Patch Special" (pumpkins, sunflowers and squash) which is advertised for youngsters but which might suit an adult beginner, too.

ASIDE FROM encouraging gardening in general, this year's Burpee catalog has two main causes.

One is to promote the American Marigold for the national flower. Lamenting the fact that the U.S.A. is the only "major free nation without a National Floral Emblem," Burpee urges you to write your Congressman on behalf of this "Friendship Flower."

The project I like even better is the idea of planting a Bicentennial Garden to beautify your home, neighborhood, community or whatever.

To make it even easier, Burpee offers several "76 specials" that sell for just 76 cents and feature red, white and blue flowers. You can order the Betsy Ross Bicentennial Special (asters) or the Old Glory Special (cornflowers). If you prefer petunias, you can "plant a flag or other patriotic ggarden design" with the Liberty Special.

BUT THEN THAT'S the major problem with seed catalogs: escalation. You start out to order three little packets of zinnias or petunias, and before you know it, you're planting "a flag or other patriotic garden design."

To make it even easier, Burpee offers a free booklet on "Bicentennial Flower Garden Plans," 10 designs "for dazzling red, white and blue gardens," to encourage you "to honor our nation's 200th birthday." You can grow your own Liberty Bell, Old Glory Thirteen Star Flag, or even your own Official U. S. Flag with Fifty Stars.

Oh — what the heck. I might as well send in an order and get the free Bicentennial plans. In January, anything is possible. And maybe, in the spirit of '76, this will be the year that the proof of performance will at least approximate the glory of the promise.

Researchers seek answers

them against heart disease.

Although there is much still to be known about heart disease, it is believed that one of every five people with high cholesterol levels in the blood inherited the disorder.

DR. JOSEPH L. Goldstein, of the University of Texas' Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, says this abnormal gene affects about one of every 500 Americans.

"Most people who carry this gene don't know they have it until they have a heart attack in their 30s," he said.

Much more rare — a one-in-a-million situation — are cases where children get the faulty genes from both parents. These people have cholesterol levels four to eight times above normal and frequently die of heart attacks in childhood.

Other factors that may also play a role in heart disease are the stresses of modern living and the sedentary lifestyle of many Americans.

In fact, two noted San Francisco cardiologists, Drs. Ray H. Rosenman and Meyer Friedman, startled the medical community two years ago when they suggested that an aggressive, competitive, impatient and restless personality may be more important in setting the stage for heart disease than diet, smoking or high blood pressure.

DR. RICHARD S. Ross, past president of the American Heart Association and dean of the Johns Hopkins Medical School in Baltimore, agreed in a debate last year with Rosenman that there is a connection between behavior and heart disease.

But Ross said there is no evidence that behavior ranks with cholesterol, blood pressure and smoking as major risks. "I think the evidence is very hard for these three," he said.

Even if the trials now under way confirm that lower cholesterol, an end to smoking and lower blood pressure will significantly reduce the risk of heart disease, can Americans be persuaded to change their lifestyles?

That is another question that remains to be answered.

The project I like even better is the idea of planting a Bicentennial Garden to beautify your home, neighborhood, community or whatever.

To make it even easier, Burpee offers several "76 specials" that sell for just 76 cents and feature red, white and blue flowers. You can order the Betsy Ross Bicentennial Special (asters) or the Old Glory Special (cornflowers). If you prefer petunias, you can "plant a flag or other patriotic ggarden design" with the Liberty Special.

BUT THEN THAT'S the major problem with seed catalogs: escalation. You start out to order three little packets of zinnias or petunias, and before you know it, you're planting "a flag or other patriotic garden design."

To make it even easier, Burpee offers a free booklet on "Bicentennial Flower Garden Plans," 10 designs "for dazzling red, white and blue gardens," to encourage you "to honor our nation's 200th birthday." You can grow your own Liberty Bell, Old Glory Thirteen Star Flag, or even your own Official U. S. Flag with Fifty Stars.

Oh — what the heck. I might as well send in an order and get the free Bicentennial plans. In January, anything is possible. And maybe, in the spirit of '76, this will be the year that the proof of performance will at least approximate the glory of the promise.

them against heart disease.

Although there is much still to be known about heart disease, it is believed that one of every five people with high cholesterol levels in the blood inherited the disorder.

DR. JOSEPH L. Goldstein, of the University of Texas' Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, says this abnormal gene affects about one of every 500 Americans.

"Most people who carry this gene don't know they have it until they have a heart attack in their 30s," he said.

Much more rare — a one-in-a-million situation — are cases where children get the faulty genes from both parents. These people have cholesterol levels four to eight times above normal and frequently die of heart attacks in childhood.

Other factors that may also play a role in heart disease are the stresses of modern living and the sedentary lifestyle of many Americans.

In fact, two noted San Francisco cardiologists, Drs. Ray H. Rosenman and Meyer Friedman, startled the medical community two years ago when they suggested that an aggressive, competitive, impatient and restless personality may be more important in setting the stage for heart disease than diet, smoking or high blood pressure.

DR. RICHARD S. Ross, past president of the American Heart Association and dean of the Johns Hopkins Medical School in Baltimore, agreed in a debate last year with Rosenman that there is a connection between behavior and heart disease.

But Ross said there is no evidence that behavior ranks with cholesterol, blood pressure and smoking as major risks. "I think the evidence is very hard for these three," he said.

Even if the trials now under way confirm that lower cholesterol, an end to smoking and lower blood pressure will significantly reduce the risk of heart disease, can Americans be persuaded to change their lifestyles?

That is another question that remains to be answered.

Hospitals date back 6,000 years

Andy sends a 20-folume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Edna Hudson, age 11, of Charlotte, N.C., for her question:

WHEN WERE THE FIRST HOSPITALS?

Every day we hear of wars, crimes and other cruel, foolish things that people get into. Sometimes we forget that these same people also perform everyday kindnesses and occasional deeds of heroism. For example, our cave man ancestors tended the sick. The history of the word hospital tells us a lot about the history of hospitals. It is related to the words hospitality, hostel, hospice and hotel. All of this suggests that early hospitals were guest homes for the sick. Until modern times, they were tended by priests and members of holy orders. In France, a public hospital still is called the Hotel-Dieu — meaning God's Hotel.

The earliest hospitals on record date back 6,000 years. By 400 B. C. special homes to care for the sick were well established in Greece and Egypt, India and ancient Babylonia. All of them were run by the priests of ancient religions, and many of these hospitals were in the temples of long-forgetten gods and goddesses. The priest-doctors tried to soothe the minds, bodies and spirits of their patients. Saturn, Apollo and Hygieis were among the special dieties of healing.

The early hospitals of the Christian Era also were run by religious orders, and many still are. Some started as hostels, or inns, in high mountain passes where weary travelers could find food and shelter. By the 4th century A.D., Christian monks had established hospitals to care for the blind and crippled, plus special hospitals for lepers. In 542 A.D. a hospital for the poor was started in Lyons, France — and it exists to this day as a public hospital.

For centuries a hospital was a place to tend the poor and the sick who could not take care of themselves. In those days doctors visited patients in their own homes and had nothing to do with the hospitals. This changed during the time of England's Henry VIII, when secular, or nonreligious, hospitals were endowed. By this time, hospitals for the poor and helpless were common throughout Europe — and early settlers brought the idea to the Americas.

In 1524 Spanish monks founded the Hospital of Jesus of Nazareth in Mexico City. It is the oldest hospital with continuous service in the New World. A hospital in Quebec was started in 1639. A hospital was established in what is now New York City in 1658. And in 1751 Benjamin Franklin helped to start a hospital in Philadelphia. The methods of a modern hospital are very different, but it still is motivated by the same humane desire to tend the sick.

Andy sends a seven-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Teresa Brown, age 10, of Florence, S.C., for her question:

CAN THE AUK BIRD FLY?

Long ago the great auk lived on rocky shores around the North Atlantic. He was a tall, slim bird as heavy as a goose. This splendid sea bird was a born fisherman, with webbed feet and a long strong beak. But he could not fly. People found him good to eat, and he was easy to catch. Soon, almost all his kinfolk were slaughtered. The last great auks were killed in June 1844.

This is a sad and shameful story. It is too late to save the great auk from extinction, but we can help to save other animals from final disaster. Meantime, the splendid great auk left behind a small cousin for us to admire. He is the little auk, and flocks of his relatives still live along northern shores. They look somewhat like small penguins. The little auks are born fishermen. And when trouble approaches they can spread their stubby wings and fly safely out to sea.

Wonder Woman to debut tonight

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wonder Woman is alive and well and living in Ojai, Calif., under an assumed name.

She has become Jaime Sommers, "The Bionic Woman," and her series bows in on Channel 7 today at 7 p.m.

The premiere is the first chapter of a two-part episode, with the second half to be broadcast the following Wednesday.

Followers of "The Six Million Dollar Man" know that the bionic woman was a former tennis pro who was given superhuman mechanical replacement parts after she almost died in a sky-diving accident.

Then she almost died again, only to be revived — but with brain damage causing amnesia and severe pain when flashbacks of memory did occur.

The new show starts with Jaime, played by long, lean Lindsay Wagner, recovering from further cybernetic surgery. She no longer suffers pain when she remembers her past, but she recalls little about her love for the bionic man.

Instead she returns to her home town of Ojai, teaching a classroom of Air Force brats at nearby Ventura AFB. She's going to take on top secret government assignments on weekends and national holidays.

In a scene with her classroom of semi-delinquents, she uses her bionic hearing to eavesdrop on one kid calling her a spooky broad, and begins to establish a relationship with her class by telling them how she believes teachers should earn respect through gentle persuasion — while tearing a giant telephone directory in half with her bare bionic hands.

It seems unlikely that Ventura, Calif., could have a telephone directory that thick — about the size of New York City's Manhattan directory — but then it also seems improbable that today's science, which can't even cure the common cold, could create a bionic woman.

Transfer offers options

The Jacoby transfer is very effective in responding to a two-notrump chance to play three of a major with a bust hand opposite a two-notrump opening. In standard bidding, any response to a two-notrump opening bid is a force.

The Jacoby transfer makes it possible for North and south to play at three hearts which makes easily, since South loses two clubs and two hearts.

In standard American, North would have to pass at two notrump (down two) or bid three and four hearts. Four hearts would go one down, but it just might happen that South would refuse to stop there.

Now change South's spades and hearts so that he holds ace-small of spades and ace-king and two small hearts.

Standard American would get to game. So does the Jacoby transfer.

South looks at his hand and sees that he wants to be in the heart game as long as North holds five hearts. He wants to be in a heart slam if North has any real values. Therefore, instead of merely bidding three hearts, he jumps to four and wraps it up.

Wonder Woman to debut tonight

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wonder Woman is alive and well and living in Ojai, Calif., under an assumed name.

She has become Jaime Sommers, "The Bionic Woman," and her series bows in on Channel 7 today at 7 p.m.

The premiere is the first chapter of a two-part episode, with the second half to be broadcast the following Wednesday.

Followers of "The Six Million Dollar Man" know that the bionic woman was a former tennis pro who was given superhuman mechanical replacement parts after she almost died in a sky-diving accident.

Then she almost died again, only to be revived — but with brain damage causing amnesia and severe pain when flashbacks of memory did occur.

The new show starts with Jaime, played by long, lean Lindsay Wagner, recovering from further cybernetic surgery. She no longer suffers pain when she remembers her past, but she recalls little about her love for the bionic man.

Instead she returns to her home town of Ojai, teaching a classroom of Air Force brats at nearby Ventura AFB. She's going to take on top secret government assignments on weekends and national holidays.

In a scene with her classroom of semi-delinquents, she uses her bionic hearing to eavesdrop on one kid calling her a spooky broad, and begins to establish a relationship with her class by telling them how she believes teachers should earn respect through gentle persuasion — while tearing a giant telephone directory in half with her bare bionic hands.

It seems unlikely that Ventura, Calif., could have a telephone directory that thick — about the size of New York City's Manhattan directory — but then it also seems improbable that today's science, which can't even cure the common cold, could create a bionic woman.

Transfer offers options

The Jacoby transfer is very effective in responding to a two-notrump chance to play three of a major with a bust hand opposite a two-notrump opening. In standard bidding, any response to a two-notrump opening bid is a force.

The Jacoby transfer makes it possible for North and south to play at three hearts which makes easily, since South loses two clubs and two hearts.

In standard American, North would have to pass at two notrump (down two) or bid three and four hearts. Four hearts would go one down, but it just might happen that South would refuse to stop there.

Now change South's spades and hearts so that he holds ace-small of spades and ace-king and two small hearts.

Standard American would get to game. So does the Jacoby transfer.

South looks at his hand and sees that he wants to be in the heart game as long as North holds five hearts. He wants to be in a heart slam if North has any real values. Therefore, instead of merely bidding three hearts, he jumps to four and wraps it up.

COMMUNICATION ARTS
WITH US IT PAYS TO LEARN
We'll put our money where your mouth is. All you have to be is 18 or over and live in suburban Cook County (outside of Chicago) to qualify for a unique training program in the creative arts. We'll take care of the rest and pay you an allowance for learning.
Cook County, through the President's office of Manpower Services and the Children's Theater of Evanston, Inc., are offering a 20 week program in creative communications — theater dramatics, radio, television and film writing, public relations, dance, and stage lighting and carpentry taught by award-winning instructors. Classes begin on January 26, 1976

NOTICE
ANNEXATION OF TERRITORY TO THE METROPOLITAN SANITARY DISTRICT OF GREATER CHICAGO

To the voters of the Village of Palatine, Cook County, State of Illinois, residing in the area hereinafter specifically described, pursuant to Article 1 of "An Act to enlarge the corporate limits of The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago" enacted by the 79th General Assembly of the State of Illinois as Senate Bill 66 and approved on December 18, 1975, as Public Act 79-1143, notice is hereby given to the voters of the territory and tracts of land situated in the Village of Palatine, County of Cook, State of Illinois, hereinafter described as follows:

The North 400 feet of the East 550 feet as measured on the East and North lines thereof, of the West half of the North West quarter of Section 33, Township 42 North, Range 10 East of the Third Principal Meridian, in Cook County, Illinois

That said voters have 30 days from January 28, 1976 within which to file a petition with the Clerk of The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago, 100 East Erie Street, Chicago, Illinois, 60611, praying that the question of the adoption of this Act (passed by the 79th Illinois General Assembly, approved December 18, 1975) providing for the extension of the corporate limits of The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago, to embrace and include within The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago, the territory and tract of land situated in the County of Cook and State of Illinois hereinabove described, be submitted to a vote of the electors of said territory, and that, if no such petition is filed, the described territory will become a part of The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago.

If such petition, signed by not less than 10% of the legal voters within the above described territory, praying that the question of the adoption of Article 1 of said Act be submitted to a vote of the electors of said territory shall be filed with the Clerk of said Sanitary District, then and in such case the question of the adoption of said Article 1 shall be submitted to a vote of the electors, as in said petition prayed, at any general or municipal election held after the adoption of said Act, and in such case, said Article 1 shall not be in force unless a majority of the votes cast at said election upon the question of the adoption of said Article 1 shall be in favor of the adoption thereof.

In case a petition is filed, it shall be the duty of the election officers having charge of the preparation of the ballots and the giving of the notices of election and the counting and canvassing and making returns of the ballots, to take all necessary steps and do all necessary acts to cause the said question of the adoption of said Article 1 to be submitted to a vote as hereinabove provided, and to cause the results of such election to be canvassed and certified as provided by law in similar cases.

SCANNING JOB listings, a job seeker checks listings in a new self-service job information program offered by the Illinois State Employment Service located in Mount Prospect.

Hiring 'boom' not expected...

February job upswing predicted

by LEA TONKIN

Job seekers, your prospects for landing an employment offer in the Northwest suburbs should improve in February. That's the prediction of Everett Callaway, office manager at the Illinois State Employment Service office, Mount Prospect.

Callaway and several suburban company spokesmen agree that there are slim pickings in the area job market. Don't give up, Callaway said. "I advise people to look every week. Across the board we have job openings coming in."

Callaway's prediction of a slow decline in the jobless rate is echoed in a U. S. Dept. of Commerce report released Monday. The federal agency expects the 1976 unemployment rate to reach an average rate of 7.5 per cent to 7.8 per cent compared to the present 8.3 per cent mark.

"We feel and everything seems to indicate that the number of openings will increase in the next month," Callaway said. Don't look for a "real boom" in job openings, he warns.

"THE DIVERSITY OF industry helps the area. Up until the recession set in, in earnest, we had an abundance of jobs. We may have been the last to be hurt by the recession, but also the last to recover," Calloway said.

A new self-service job information system at the State Employment Service office, 40 N. Main St., will speed up the job-finding process. Applicants who are receiving unemployment compensation and area residents who do not qualify for the payments can use the service.

Callaway said the self-service system is easy to use. An applicant selects a list of job openings for his specialized field, such as management trainee, machine service or engineering. The microfiche list can be checked on a viewer. When an applicant finds a job opening that suits his requirements, he talks to an employment counselor to arrange an interview.

"We've never had a shortage of jobs in the secretarial field — the jobs are there," said Fred Vaisvil, a placement director at Harper College, Palatine. For other job-hunters, "it may be loosening up but it's still too early to tell," Vaisvil said. Insurance sales and retailing management are fields where there are job openings, he said.

NORTHWEST SUBURBAN employment comment is offered by several firms:

• Fran Sprecher of Sheets Employment Service, Arlington Heights, said "high caliber" secretaries and bookkeepers are in demand. The slight increase in job openings "is not anything to scream about," she said. "Salaries are somewhat lower due to the abundance of people seeking work. We find the job market is very tight."

• Addressograph Multigraph Corp., field operations division, Schaumburg, is hiring a limited number of personel said Jerry Hoelscher, manager of division personnel. Clerical and accounting personnel may be hired, although the firm is transferring employes from other locations to the Schaumburg office.

• A "status quo" employment outlook is offered by Martin Brown, public relations director for Central Telephone Co., Des Plaines. A reduction in employment through attrition and some layoffs because of installation of automated equipment was reported.

• An increasingly selective hiring of college graduates is planned by the Chemplex Co., said Tony Bartolini, manager of employe relations for the Rolling Meadows facility. Bartolini said area firms may seek applicants who have engineering and accounting degrees, although openings are limited.

Manager training session set Jan. 15

A management training session will be sponsored Jan. 15 by the Northwest Suburban Chicago Chapter of the National Assn. of Accountants. The session, at Lancer's Steak House, Schaumburg, will start at 9 a.m.

Al Carlson of the local chapter said the all-day training session is open to the public. A $25 fee will be charged.

Price slump halts stock rally; Dow drops 9.45

NEW YORK (UPI) — The strong new year rally on Wall Street came to an abrupt end Tuesday with prices declining sharply in the second heaviest trading day in the 184-year-history of the New York Stock Exchange.

The success of the rally led to the market's undoing as investors cashed in on strong price increases in seven prior sessions.

The turnover of 34,530,000 shares was second only to the 35,158,000 shares traded Feb. 13, 1975, the day President Ford became the first President ever to visit Wall Street.

THE STAMPEDE also produced uncertainty. The Dow Jones industrial average, a 69.98-point winner the previous seven sessions, fell 9.45 points to 912.94. The Dow, an 11.26-point winner Monday, had been ahead more than five at the outset.

"A lot of guys were saying 'I missed the rally last year, I'm not going to miss this one,' " Newton Zinder, vice president of E. F. Hutton & Co., said. "I'm not so sure things are that rosy."

"There wasn't particular news development that triggered this trading," Zinder said. "Everybody got in on the act. Our figures showed institutions generally have been responsible for the new year rally and they were active again today. There were some smaller guys, but not that many."

With everyone jumping on the bandwagon, the new NYSE high-speed consolidated transaction tape ran a record 28 minutes late at one time. The old mark was 26 minutes on May 3, 1968, when the Big Board used a different tabulating system.

PRICES WERE HIGHER in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the trading pace was so frantic, many professional traders retreated to the sidelines until they could get a clearer picture of the market's trend.

This produced some profit taking, which most observers had expected. They said it was normal in light of the unprecedented new year rally. That rally was what prompted many investors to jump on the bandwagon Tuesday.

Citicorp, parent of First National City Bank of New York, led the Big Board actives most of the day. The stock topped the actives Monday, losing ½ point, following newspaper reports the bank was on a "problem" list of bank regulators.

The Comptroller of the Currency said the bank was one of the strongest in the nation and termed the newspaper report "irresponsible." In light of the controversy, U.S. Sen. William O. Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, has called for hearings dealing with the office of the Comptroller.

SCANNING JOB listings, a job seeker checks listings in a new self-service job information program offered by the Illinois State Employment Service located in Mount Prospect.

Hiring 'boom' not expected...

February job upswing predicted

by LEA TONKIN

Job seekers, your prospects for landing an employment offer in the Northwest suburbs should improve in February. That's the prediction of Everett Callaway, office manager at the Illinois State Employment Service office, Mount Prospect.

Callaway and several suburban company spokesmen agree that there are slim pickings in the area job market. Don't give up, Callaway said. "I advise people to look every week. Across the board we have job openings coming in."

Callaway's prediction of a slow decline in the jobless rate is echoed in a U. S. Dept. of Commerce report released Monday. The federal agency expects the 1976 unemployment rate to reach an average rate of 7.5 per cent to 7.8 per cent compared to the present 8.3 per cent mark.

"We feel and everything seems to indicate that the number of openings will increase in the next month," Callaway said. Don't look for a "real boom" in job openings, he warns.

"THE DIVERSITY OF industry helps the area. Up until the recession set in, in earnest, we had an abundance of jobs. We may have been the last to be hurt by the recession, but also the last to recover," Calloway said.

A new self-service job information system at the State Employment Service office, 40 N. Main St., will speed up the job-finding process. Applicants who are receiving unemployment compensation and area residents who do not qualify for the payments can use the service.

Callaway said the self-service system is easy to use. An applicant selects a list of job openings for his specialized field, such as management trainee, machine service or engineering. The microfiche list can be checked on a viewer. When an applicant finds a job opening that suits his requirements, he talks to an employment counselor to arrange an interview.

"We've never had a shortage of jobs in the secretarial field — the jobs are there," said Fred Vaisvil, a placement director at Harper College, Palatine. For other job-hunters, "it may be loosening up but it's still too early to tell," Vaisvil said. Insurance sales and retailing management are fields where there are job openings, he said.

NORTHWEST SUBURBAN employment comment is offered by several firms:

• Fran Sprecher of Sheets Employment Service, Arlington Heights, said "high caliber" secretaries and bookkeepers are in demand. The slight increase in job openings "is not anything to scream about," she said. "Salaries are somewhat lower due to the abundance of people seeking work. We find the job market is very tight."

• Addressograph Multigraph Corp., field operations division, Schaumburg, is hiring a limited number of personel said Jerry Hoelscher, manager of division personnel. Clerical and accounting personnel may be hired, although the firm is transferring employes from other locations to the Schaumburg office.

• A "status quo" employment outlook is offered by Martin Brown, public relations director for Central Telephone Co., Des Plaines. A reduction in employment through attrition and some layoffs because of installation of automated equipment was reported.

• An increasingly selective hiring of college graduates is planned by the Chemplex Co., said Tony Bartolini, manager of employe relations for the Rolling Meadows facility. Bartolini said area firms may seek applicants who have engineering and accounting degrees, although openings are limited.

Manager training session set Jan. 15

A management training session will be sponsored Jan. 15 by the Northwest Suburban Chicago Chapter of the National Assn. of Accountants. The session, at Lancer's Steak House, Schaumburg, will start at 9 a.m.

Al Carlson of the local chapter said the all-day training session is open to the public. A $25 fee will be charged.

Price slump halts stock rally; Dow drops 9.45

NEW YORK (UPI) — The strong new year rally on Wall Street came to an abrupt end Tuesday with prices declining sharply in the second heaviest trading day in the 184-year-history of the New York Stock Exchange.

The success of the rally led to the market's undoing as investors cashed in on strong price increases in seven prior sessions.

The turnover of 34,530,000 shares was second only to the 35,158,000 shares traded Feb. 13, 1975, the day President Ford became the first President ever to visit Wall Street.

THE STAMPEDE also produced uncertainty. The Dow Jones industrial average, a 69.98-point winner the previous seven sessions, fell 9.45 points to 912.94. The Dow, an 11.26-point winner Monday, had been ahead more than five at the outset.

"A lot of guys were saying 'I missed the rally last year, I'm not going to miss this one,' " Newton Zinder, vice president of E. F. Hutton & Co., said. "I'm not so sure things are that rosy."

"There wasn't particular news development that triggered this trading," Zinder said. "Everybody got in on the act. Our figures showed institutions generally have been responsible for the new year rally and they were active again today. There were some smaller guys, but not that many."

With everyone jumping on the bandwagon, the new NYSE high-speed consolidated transaction tape ran a record 28 minutes late at one time. The old mark was 26 minutes on May 3, 1968, when the Big Board used a different tabulating system.

PRICES WERE HIGHER in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the trading pace was so frantic, many professional traders retreated to the sidelines until they could get a clearer picture of the market's trend.

This produced some profit taking, which most observers had expected. They said it was normal in light of the unprecedented new year rally. That rally was what prompted many investors to jump on the bandwagon Tuesday.

Citicorp, parent of First National City Bank of New York, led the Big Board actives most of the day. The stock topped the actives Monday, losing ½ point, following newspaper reports the bank was on a "problem" list of bank regulators.

The Comptroller of the Currency said the bank was one of the strongest in the nation and termed the newspaper report "irresponsible." In light of the controversy, U.S. Sen. William O. Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, has called for hearings dealing with the office of the Comptroller.

Saxons top Bison with strong start

by ART MUGALIAN

The Schaumburg Saxons shot out to a lightning-quick eight-point lead in the first quarter and never relinquished it, defeating Buffalo Grove 60-54 in a crossover game that highlighted Tuesday evening's Mid-Suburban League basketball schedule.

The host Saxons, now 13-2, put four scorers in double figures, including Ed Chmiel, who got seven of his 15 points in the fourth quarter when Buffalo Grove mounted a serious comeback bid. Chmiel turned a steal into a three-point play at the 2:36 mark to give Schaumburg a 56-48 lead.

The Bison had carved a 14-point Saxon lead at the beginning of the fourth period down to five, mainly on the shooting of 6-foot-8 Brian Allsmiller who led all players with 30.

But the ball-handling of Chmiel and fellow guard Bill Solik and some clutch base-line shooting by Jon McIlraith cracked the Bison pressure tactics in the final eight minutes.

Schaumburg broke Buffalo Grove's three-quarter court press in the first period and jumped out to a 16-8 edge as 6-5 forward Dan Breen hit four baskets, all from 20 feet or more.

The lead mounted in the second quarter as Schaumburg pressure created a Bison turnover and the Saxons took quick advantage. Chmiel stole the ball under the basket and passed to Solik for an easy layup and a 26-14 edge.

Allsmiller shot 13-for-24 from the field and managed 20 points in the second half despite Schaumburg's aggressive defense. He also had 15 rebounds for the game.

Schaumburg's 6-6 sophomore center John Chmiel countered Allsmiller's efforts with seven baskets for 14 points, including four in the third period.

Buffalo Grove closed to within 56-52 with one minute left in the game but two free throws by Ed Chmiel and one each by Breen and Marty Golub sealed the win.

McIlraith had 11 points and Solik 10 for Schaumburg.

Viking balance

by PAUL LOGAN

A balanced Fremd Viking attack offset the 36-point effort by Palatine's Kevin McKenna to give the visiting Vikings a 67-64 victory.

The exciting offensive battle between these cross-town rivals went down to the final minute with the outcome in doubt. Following a baseline jumper by McKenna that put the Pirates ahead, 64-62, guard Dale Hallberg swished a 20-footre to deadlock the contest. Teammate Rick Kolze was fouled during the shot. He sank both ends of the one-and-one, making a four-point play.

McKenna, who was masterful with his outside shooting most of the night, missed his last two shots, however. Fremd's Greg Schroeder hit a free throw to provide the margin of victory.

"I think this really gave our kids a lift," said Fremd coach Mo Tharp afterwards. It marked the Vikings' first MSL win in three tries.

Kerry Field came off the bench to lead the Vikings with 14. Then closely behind came Paul Stanczak 13, Craig Rawlins 12, Paul Gillette 8, Schroeder 8 and Hallberg 6. Kolze, Fremd's leading scorer, only had six points, but those last two were the most important.

Ken Reid was the only other Pirate in double figures with 11. He also paced the Pirates with 12 rebounds.

Fremd won the battle of the boards, 36-32, as Stanczak was tops with nine.

Big Knight finish

by KEITH REINHARD

Mike Wood finished what Chris Etter started and Prospect roared past visiting Wheeling 85-66 in a cross-division clash.

Etter plunked in a dozen points in the opening stanza and Wood riddled the net for the same number of fourth quarter points to help the Knights break open the hotly-contested encounter. Together the senior duo combined for nearly 50 of Prospect's total offensive production while dealing the Wildcats their fifth loss in 13 outings this season.

"We had a few lucky bounces here and there," understated Knight coach Bill Slayton. Actually his club turned the ball over more than the guests (18-16) but they overcompensated with a sizzling 60 shooting tempo from the floor.

Etter boosted the hosts into a 23-17 first period lead, but the 'Cats stormed back before halftime, moving ahead 35-31 on Brian Begrowicz's 15-footer and Keith Schildt's rebound shot. Prospect answered back with three straight from the floor to own a two-point mid-game edge.

The game was last tied 45-45 on a pair of Schildt free throws at 3:26. Two buckets by Tim Kubicki then helped the Knights move on top by seven after three periods and Wood plunked in 10 points during a three-minute span to open period four and Prospect was on their way to win No. 6 in 15 tries.

Wood finished with 26 and Etter had 23. Schildt paced Wheeling with 21 while Rick McGowan and Dave Schultz added 10 apiece.

Elk Grove wins

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

The Elk Grove Grenadiers, operating without starting guard Joe Parmentier, hit their first four shots and raced to a 65-52 Mid-Suburban League South Division victory over the Rolling Meadows Mustangs.

The Grens, who have been stumbling in league play, jerked their record to 2-3 and 10-4 over-all. Meadows now stands 2-3 in the league and 4-9 on the season.

Parmentier, who is out with a strep throat, was missed but Mike Behm picked up the guard slack with the best game of his varsity career.

He hit his first three shots to pace an 18-6 Elk Grove first quarter and finished with 19 to lead all scorers.

Dave Hornacek followed with 17 points, turning it on after being held to a single basket in the first half. Mark Sass rounded out the Grens in double figures with 16 points.

Meadows suffered shaky ballhandling and poor shooting in the fateful first period and could get only as close as nine points the rest of the game.

Gerry McGill led the Mustangs with 10 points while Bill Wissen kicked in nine, most of them in the second half, and Terry Moran eight.

Only girl in league gains respect as hockey goalie

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Mites Mosquitos, a team for 5 to 8-year-olds in the Waukesha Youth Hockey Association, has a goalie whose main interest used to be ballet and who has been known to cry when the other team scores.

But Tina Schaffer doesn't let the fact she is the only girl in the league get in the way of her play.

"Of course, it took a little while for the boys to get used to it," said Marv Manninen of Milwaukee, the team's coach.

"But I didn't really know how much respect some of the players had gained for her until the other game when Brian Zilvitis (an 8-year-old teammate) patted her on the rear with his stick and told her, 'Tina, we need some tremendous saves'."

Tina, 8, is the daughter of Gary and Maryse Schaffer of Elm Grove, Wis. She became interested in hockey because her brothers, Gary Jr., 9, and Dax, 5, both play.

Tina was encouraged by her mother, who lived in Canada for several years.

"You don't play hockey in Canada, you have no social life," Mrs. Schaffer told the Milwaukee Journal.

Manninen said Tina is the team's goalie because of her mobility.

"Actually, when the kids are that young, there shouldn't be any goalies," he said. "They all should be skating, developing their basic skills. But she's stronger than most of the boys so I asked her about being a goalie and she wanted to try."

In her first two games, she allowed a total of 15 goals, but has given up only 7 in her last two.

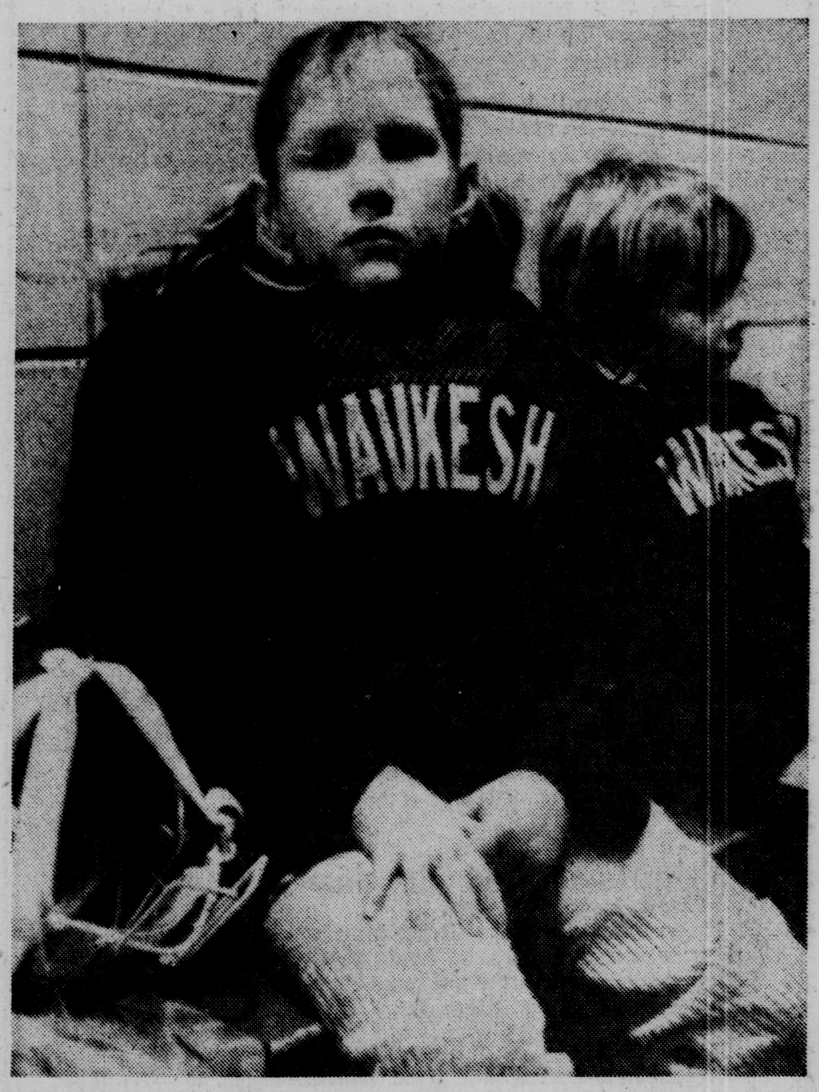
How good is she?

"I don't want to compare myself to the boy goalies," Tina said, "Because if they read what I say they'll probably just get mad 'cause I'm a girl."

In one recent match, she stopped 22 of 24 shots and her team earned a tie.

"After the game, the guys on my team all came around me and patted me on the back, and then the other team started shaking hands with us," she said.

"Then, when I took my helmet off, they wouldn't shake my hand."



THE MITES Mosquitoes, a team for 5 to 8 year olds in the Waukesha, Wis. Youth Hockey Assn., has an outstanding goalie who is the only girl in the league. Tina Schaffer is an 8-year-old whose main interest before hockey was ballet.

Awesome grizzly bear on long losing streak

He could take the mightiest pass protection pocket and destroy it with a swipe of his right paw. He could take the fiercest pass rush and crush it without a grunt. He's an all-time All-American, all right. He was here before the Indians.

Sack the quarterback? He could eat the quarterback. Mean Joe Greene? Mean, Joe Greene would climb a tree if he saw him coming.

His name is Ursus horribilis and, no, he's not a placekicker from Crete, he's a native-born North American. Bear Bryant got his nickname from wrestling a bear, but this fellow wrestles bears all the time. He could break the back of an ox with a blow. He weighs 1,500 pounds — evenly distributed over all 9 feet.

He's not a Chicago Bear, he's a grizzly bear, and no NFL line or linebacker could stop him. He can run 30 miles an hour, play in any kind of weather, Muhammad Ali wouldn't fight him for Ft. Knox.

Of course, he's not a very good team player. He's a loner. He won't stay in a zone. On the other hand, he doesn't have an agent. He probably works for peanuts. Literally.

You would think an awesome creature like this would not have to be protected from its enemies. But the sad fact is, the American grizzly, one of the most magnificent physical specimens in all of nature, is no match at all for one potbellied, near-sighted, false-teethed, dyspeptic little runt with a hearing aid — and a gun. He is being run out of existence by the most efficient predator in all the wild kingdom — man.

He is one creature that cannot stand man. He doesn't fear man, he just dislikes him. Which is why you hever see the American grizzly begging from cars. He is becoming as extinct as the plains bison.

He has been placed on the endangered species list, which will be good news to all grizzlies but even better news for horses. To hunt grizzlies, you first take one horse, kill it — and leave the carcass out to attract the king of bears. Try it in a Disney movie sometime. Think the kiddies would like to see "My Son Flicka" set out as bear bait by a bunch of buys with hunting licenses?

Actually, Larry Pate, who is a biologist with the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission at the state booth at the 11th annual Sports Vacation and Recreational Vehicle Show at Anaheim's Convention Center, thinks that Disney's "personalizing" of animal characters has done wide damage to what he called good game management.

Grizzly bears, Larry Pate points out, never walk out of the woods wearing pointed Boy Scout hats to warn children not to light matches. To a child, and sometimes even to papa and mama, a bear is Yogi Bear or Gentle Ben or Smoky. To the bear, they're food. The story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears would be a lot bloodier if it were a documentary.

Still you've got to be awfully unlucky to be attacked by a grizzly. There are only about 250 to 400 of them left in the United States — in the Wyoming Yellowstone area. Nor are they likely to make a comeback unless one starts running guns into them. They breed only once very two years — usually twins.

They can travel more than 35 miles overnight, eating as they go, anything that comes their way, fish, berries, backpackers. And it's no use to hide under the car on them. They can smell clear across two state lines. And if a bear runs away from you, it ain't a grizzly.

Grizzly bears are on a longer losing streak than Chicago's. Most have been turned into rugs. It's too bad they can't be suited up and taught the I formation, and put on scholarship. Because this country takes a lot better care of its Cal Bears or Chicago Bears than its real ones.

It's official! Caray will return as voice of Chicago White Sox

Harry "Holy Cow!" Caray will stay in town, at least for one more year.

The colorful Caray was rehired to do Chicago White Sox baseball games by WSNS (Channel 44) television and WMAQ radio.

It was indicated that Caray's salary will be paid by the TV and radio stations instead of the White Sox as it had been in the past.

No announcement was made on Caray's broadcasting partners although J. C. Martin apparently has been ruled out completely from 1976 plans. Bill Mercer, who worked both radio and television last season, may return, but the stations would make no official statement Tuesday.

This will be Caray's 31st year as a major league baseball announcer. All of his previous experience, except one year with Oakland, was calling the play-by-play for the St. Louis Cardinals.

DePaul vs. Marquette on radio

WWMM-FM (92.7) will cover tonight one of the most significant college basketball games played in the Chicago area in years.

DePaul University, bidding for national recognition and possessing a 10-2 record, will entertain once-beaten Marquette at 8 p.m. in DePaul's Alumni Hall. The game is a sellout.

Bob Houghton of WWMM and Bob Frisk of The Herald will be at the microphones for the college headliner with The Ray Meyer Show kicking off the broadcast at 7:45 p.m.

The game matches two of college basketball's most respected coaches, Meyer of DePaul and Al McGuire of Marquette, and in the spotlight for the host Blue Demons will be Capt. Andy Pancratz, a senior, and sophomore Dave Corzine, former Hersey High School stars.

Marquette's only loss was to Minnesota. DePaul includes Louisville and Providence among its 10 victims this season and has won its last two games by margins of 25 and 23 points.

Saxons top Bison with strong start

by ART MUGALIAN

The Schaumburg Saxons shot out to a lightning-quick eight-point lead in the first quarter and never relinquished it, defeating Buffalo Grove 60-54 in a crossover game that highlighted Tuesday evening's Mid-Suburban League basketball schedule.

The host Saxons, now 13-2, put four scorers in double figures, including Ed Chmiel, who got seven of his 15 points in the fourth quarter when Buffalo Grove mounted a serious comeback bid. Chmiel turned a steal into a three-point play at the 2:36 mark to give Schaumburg a 56-48 lead.

The Bison had carved a 14-point Saxon lead at the beginning of the fourth period down to five, mainly on the shooting of 6-foot-8 Brian Allsmiller who led all players with 30.

But the ball-handling of Chmiel and fellow guard Bill Solik and some clutch base-line shooting by Jon McIlraith cracked the Bison pressure tactics in the final eight minutes.

Schaumburg broke Buffalo Grove's three-quarter court press in the first period and jumped out to a 16-8 edge as 6-5 forward Dan Breen hit four baskets, all from 20 feet or more.

The lead mounted in the second quarter as Schaumburg pressure created a Bison turnover and the Saxons took quick advantage. Chmiel stole the ball under the basket and passed to Solik for an easy layup and a 26-14 edge.

Allsmiller shot 13-for-24 from the field and managed 20 points in the second half despite Schaumburg's aggressive defense. He also had 15 rebounds for the game.

Schaumburg's 6-6 sophomore center John Chmiel countered Allsmiller's efforts with seven baskets for 14 points, including four in the third period.

Buffalo Grove closed to within 56-52 with one minute left in the game but two free throws by Ed Chmiel and one each by Breen and Marty Golub sealed the win.

McIlraith had 11 points and Solik 10 for Schaumburg.

He could take the mightiest pass protection pocket and destroy it with a swipe of his right paw. He could take the fiercest pass rush and crush it without a grunt. He's an all-time All-American, all right. He was here before the Indians.

Sack the quarterback? He could eat the quarterback. Mean Joe Greene? Mean, Joe Greene would climb a tree if he saw him coming.

His name is Ursus horribilis and, no, he's not a placekicker from Crete, he's a native-born North American. Bear Bryant got his nickname from wrestling a bear, but this fellow wrestles bears all the time. He could break the back of an ox with a blow. He weighs 1,500 pounds — evenly distributed over all 9 feet.

He's not a Chicago Bear, he's a grizzly bear, and no NFL line or linebacker could stop him. He can run 30 miles an hour, play in any kind of weather, Muhammad Ali wouldn't fight him for Ft. Knox.

Of course, he's not a very good team player. He's a loner. He won't stay in a zone. On the other hand, he doesn't have an agent. He probably works for peanuts. Literally.

You would think an awesome creature like this would not have to be protected from its enemies. But the sad fact is, the American grizzly, one of the most magnificent physical specimens in all of nature, is no match at all for one potbellied, near-sighted, false-teethed, dyspeptic little runt with a hearing aid — and a gun. He is being run out of existence by the most efficient predator in all the wild kingdom — man.

He is one creature that cannot stand man. He doesn't fear man, he just dislikes him. Which is why you hever see the American grizzly begging from cars. He is becoming as extinct as the plains bison.

He has been placed on the endangered species list, which will be good news to all grizzlies but even better news for horses. To hunt grizzlies, you first take one horse, kill it — and leave the carcass out to attract the king of bears. Try it in a Disney movie sometime. Think the kiddies would like to see "My Son Flicka" set out as bear bait by a bunch of buys with hunting licenses?

Actually, Larry Pate, who is a biologist with the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission at the state booth at the 11th annual Sports Vacation and Recreational Vehicle Show at Anaheim's Convention Center, thinks that Disney's "personalizing" of animal characters has done wide damage to what he called good game management.

Grizzly bears, Larry Pate points out, never walk out of the woods wearing pointed Boy Scout hats to warn children not to light matches. To a child, and sometimes even to papa and mama, a bear is Yogi Bear or Gentle Ben or Smoky. To the bear, they're food. The story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears would be a lot bloodier if it were a documentary.

Still you've got to be awfully unlucky to be attacked by a grizzly. There are only about 250 to 400 of them left in the United States — in the Wyoming Yellowstone area. Nor are they likely to make a comeback unless one starts running guns into them. They breed only once very two years — usually twins.

They can travel more than 35 miles overnight, eating as they go, anything that comes their way, fish, berries, backpackers. And it's no use to hide under the car on them. They can smell clear across two state lines. And if a bear runs away from you, it ain't a grizzly.

Grizzly bears are on a longer losing streak than Chicago's. Most have been turned into rugs. It's too bad they can't be suited up and taught the I formation, and put on scholarship. Because this country takes a lot better care of its Cal Bears or Chicago Bears than its real ones.

It's official! Caray will return as voice of Chicago White Sox

Harry "Holy Cow!" Caray will stay in town, at least for one more year.

The colorful Caray was rehired to do Chicago White Sox baseball games by WSNS (Channel 44) television and WMAQ radio.

It was indicated that Caray's salary will be paid by the TV and radio stations instead of the White Sox as it had been in the past.

No announcement was made on Caray's broadcasting partners although J. C. Martin apparently has been ruled out completely from 1976 plans. Bill Mercer, who worked both radio and television last season, may return, but the stations would make no official statement Tuesday.

This will be Caray's 31st year as a major league baseball announcer. All of his previous experience, except one year with Oakland, was calling the play-by-play for the St. Louis Cardinals.

DePaul vs. Marquette on radio

WWMM-FM (92.7) will cover tonight one of the most significant college basketball games played in the Chicago area in years.

DePaul University, bidding for national recognition and possessing a 10-2 record, will entertain once-beaten Marquette at 8 p.m. in DePaul's Alumni Hall. The game is a sellout.

Bob Houghton of WWMM and Bob Frisk of The Herald will be at the microphones for the college headliner with The Ray Meyer Show kicking off the broadcast at 7:45 p.m.

The game matches two of college basketball's most respected coaches, Meyer of DePaul and Al McGuire of Marquette, and in the spotlight for the host Blue Demons will be Capt. Andy Pancratz, a senior, and sophomore Dave Corzine, former Hersey High School stars.

Marquette's only loss was to Minnesota. DePaul includes Louisville and Providence among its 10 victims this season and has won its last two games by margins of 25 and 23 points.

Expansion clubs sue; NFL delays drafts

The National Football League decided Tuesday to postpone both its expansion and college player drafts after its two new incoming franchises, Seattle and Tampa Bay, initiated a joint suit against the NFL Players Association.

The expansion draft, which would stock the two new clubs, was scheduled Friday, Jan. 23, in New Orleans while the annual college player draft was to begin Tuesday, Feb. 3, in New York.

The suit, announced jointly by Seattle's Herman Sarkowsky and Hugh Culverhouse of Tampa, charges the Players Association, its officers, headed by executive director Ed Garvey, and the player representatives of the 26 existing clubs with "willful interference" in the rights of the new clubs.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the delay of the two drafts was necessary in order to allow the courts time to determine the legality of the draft. He explained it would be impractical to conduct the college draft with the two new clubs participating and then have the expansion program postponed because of legal problems.

Hoosiers top poll; DePaul 17th

Indiana is still unanimously the number one team in college basketball in the latest UPI coaches' poll, but the DePaul Blue Demons of Chicago, have cracked the ratings for the first time this year.

The Blue Demons, 9-2 on the year going into tonight's showdown with number two ranked Marquette, (9-1) tied for the 17th spot with Arizona State (8-1).

The Demons are host for the sold-out contest which will be televised locally by Channel 44 and broadcast on radio station WWMM-FM (92.7).

Marquette climbed to the number two ranking behind 12-0 Indiana after previously number two Maryland and number three UCLA both lost.

Rounding out the top 10 are Washington (13-0), Maryland (11-1), Wake Forest (11-1), Nevada-Las Vegas (16-0), North Carolina (10-1), UCLA (11-2), Alabama (10-1) and Tennessee (9-1).

NCAA football rules changes asked

The American Football Coaches Association rules committee Tuesday recommended the adoption of a tie-breaker for Division I football.

The recommendation, along with several others announced Tuesday, will be taken to the NCAA rules committee convention in Nashville, Tenn., next week.

Other requests from the AFCA include reducing all 15-yard penalties — except personal fouls — to 10 yards, and providing for penalties committed after a completed pass to be marked off from the point of completion.

Another change would place a ball fumbled on fourth down and inside the 10-yard line at the point of fumble instead of recovery — provided it goes untouched by the defense.

Under the proposal if a game is tied at the end of regulation time, the ball would be placed on the 20-yard line and a team would have a maximum of eight plays — providing it can pick up a first down at the 10 — to score by either a field goal or a touchdown.

After the first team either scores or turns the ball over on downs, the other team would be given an opportunity to start on the 20-yard line. The process would continue until one team scores and the other does not.

Last-second shot sinks Bulls

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored at the buzzer to cap a 35-point performance and give the Los Angeles Lakers a 104-102 National Basketball Association victory over the Bulls Tuesday night.

With the score tied 102-102, Chicago's Bob Love missed a shot with three seconds to play. Los Angeles called time out then Abdul-Jabbar took the inbounds pass, pivoted around and put one off the boards to give the Lakers the win.

Love was high for the Bulls with 30.

Tom Boerwinkle scored eight points and pulled down eight rebounds in the first period as the Bulls built up a 27-23 lead. The 6-foot-11 center scored 21 points in the game.

The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for the Lakers and was the first loss in three games for the Bulls.

49ers tap Dolphins for new coach

The San Francisco 49ers Tuesday named Monte Clark as their new head coach in hopes that he could punch up their attack with the same success with which he built the Miami Dolphins' ground game.

Clark succeeds Dick Nolan, who was released after leading the team to 54 wins, 53 losses and five ties over an eight-year span. When the team finished with a disappointing 5-9 mark this season, Nolan was cut loose with a year to go on his contract.

Clark, now 38, was drafted by the San Francisco 49ers in 1959 in the fourth round as a young tackle out of USC. He played 11 years for the 49ers, Dallas and Cleveland and appeared in four NFL title games before turning to coaching in 1970 when he joined Don Shula at Miami and was put in charge of the ground attack.

Giants to stay in San Francisco?

If San Francisco Mayor George Moscone can make a couple of minor concessions when he comes to Phoenix Wednesday, Bob Short, former president of the Texas Rangers, will be approved as the new owner of the Giants with a promise to keep them in the Bay Area city.

According to sources close to the National League, no vote will be taken Wednesday on Horace Stoneham's conditional sale of the Giants to Toronto interests. That's because of an injunction filed Monday in San Francisco prohibiting Stoneham, the National Exhibition Company and the National League from transferring the Giants to another city.

Bradley U. seeks new conference

Bradley University, currently a member of the Missouri Valley Conference, has applied for membership in the Metro Six basketball conference, it was reported Tuesday.

Des Moines station KCCI-TV said Bradley, of Peoria, was one of four schools seeking admission to the conference, which has been planning to expand to at least eight teams.

The six schools currently in the conference are Louisville, Memphis State, Tulane, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Georgia Tech. All but Tulane and Georgia Tech were members of the Missouri Valley Conference prior to joining the Metro Six, which is in its first year of play.

The station said the other schools seeking admission are Florida State, Jacksonville and North Carolina-Charlotte.

Neither Bradley Athletic Director Chuck Orsborn nor officials of either conference were immediately available for comment and were believed to be in St. Louis attending an NCAA meeting.

Illini win on Hersey mats

Breaking into a big lead, Illinois wrestlers fended off a strong late showing by Northern Iowa and issued the defending Division II champs their first setback of the season 19-17 in a special mat meeting conducted in Hersey's gymnasium.

A turnout in excess of 500 braved inclement weather to see former Huskie wrestling coach Tom Porter return and direct his Illini to their third triumph in five bouts this winter. Small college power Northern Iowa is now 4-1.

Two ex-Huskie standouts in the Illinois lineup both suffered defeats but not until Porter's club had jumped into a quick 11-0 command. Freshman Mark Furlong was later pinned by Iowa's James Blasingame in his 150-pound scrape and heavyweight Kevin Pancratz was outpointed in the finale.

The Illini lineup is comprised entirely of in-state athletes and Porter does not have a senior on his team. Three freshmen started for him Saturday.

Hoffman offers soccer clinics

The Soccer Club of the Hoffman Estates Park District will hold clinics for coaches and referees on Sundays, Jan. 18, and Jan 25, from 2-4 p.m. at Eisenhower Junior High School.

The soccer clinics will be headed by Jim Napier. Demonstrations will be given by several soccer coaches on the basic fundamentals of soccer, followed by a question and answer period.

Parent participation is appreciated. Anyone interested in coaching, refereeing or helping out in any capacity, feel free to come.

Napier, with the assistance of Chuck Gasperi, is forming an instructional soccer club for 5 and 6 year-old boys and girls. This is the first time that such a program is being held in this area.

Registration forms will be available at the clinics. If there are any further questions, contact the Hoffman Estates Park District Office at 885-7500.

Maine-Northfield baseball signup

Maine-Northfield Little League, celebrating its 19th year, will hold registration for both Little League (ages 8-12) and Senior League (13-15) on Saturdays, Jan. 17 and 24 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Sundays, Jan. 18 and 25 from noon to 3 p.m. at Flick Park fieldhouse in Glenview.

National Little League rules requires every child to present a valid birth (not hospital) certificate at the time of registration. Registration fees are 30 for one child and $35 for two or more. For more information, contact Robert Godzicki at 729-3645.

Bankers build Classic margin

In Paddock Junior Classic action Sunday, Des Plaines National Bank took seven points from Hoffman to gain a 13 point lead. Beverly and Wauconda also took seven points, from Fairlanes and Ten Pin respectively.

Des Plaines is on top of the standings with 72 points followed by Hoffman with 59 and Fairlanes with 57.

Des Plaines opened their sweep with a 919-825 win over Hoffman, paced by Steve Fleming's 219 and Dana Vicker's 204. The Bankers won the second and third games by scores of 902-888 and 861-835.

Pat Fiddick twirled a 200 game for Fairlanes but Beverly still prevailed in the first game 863-846. Fiddick threw another 200 game in the second round but Fairlanes dropped it, and the third game, 861-855 and 900-818.

Wauconda won their seven points from Ten Pin by scores of 926-824, 890-875 and 865-765.

High shooters for Des Plaines were Fleming 577, and Vickers 579. The big guns for Fairlanes was Fiddick with 580 and for Wauconda, Ashmore 507.

Never caught stealing

Gus Triandos, a major league catcher for 13 years, played 1,206 games with five different teams in both leagues and was never caught stealing. Triandos, who started with the Yankees in 1953 and finished up with the Astros in 1965, was one-for-one in the stolen base department.

2 area players just miss titles in table tennis

Jim Davey, Chicago, won the Illinois State Table Tennis men's singles championship for the third straight year Saturday, while two Arlington Heights youths placed high in the finals.

Davey defeated Faan Hoan Liu of Arlington for the title. Liu's sister Faan Yeen was runnerup to Barbra Taschner, Mundelein, in women's singles.

Faan Hoan teamed with Paul Pashuku, Chicago, to win the men's doubles over Leonard McNeece, Maywood, and Davey.

Other results follow: Class A, McNeece, first; John Hart, Chicago, second. Class B, Joe Bujacski, Roselle, first; Taschner second. Class C, Paul Jordan, Peoria, first; Ira Wiener, Chicago, second. Class D, Jordan, first; Tom Butts, Peoria, second.

Play was conducted at the Chicago Table Tennis Club, 2047 N. Milwaukee, Chicago.

Palatine baseball league registration

Palatine North Little League registration will be conducted at Winston Park School Saturday Jan. 17 and 24 between 9 a.m. and noon. Players between 8-12 must register at this time.

Boundary requirements are north of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad tracks, west of Rte. 53 and south of Dundee Rd. Birth certificates are mandatory and parents must accompany registrants.

The fee is $35 for one individual, $50 for two and $60 for three or more.

Palatine North has established a Pony and Colt League for boys 13-14 and 15-16, respectively. Registration fees are the same as above.

Saturday signup in HEAA soccer club

The Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. will hold its annual spring soccer registration on Saturday, Jan. 17 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Vogelei Barn.

Boys and girls in grades one through 12 are invited to sign up. For further information contact Joe Wrobleski at 885-1389 or Dave Farr at 885-4845.

TV History

by Ed Landwehr

Public television has been on the market for about thirty years, but it is much older than most realize. The first picture tube patents were issued in 1923. President Hoover televised a speech on April 8, 1927. A play "Queen's Messenger" was viewed on TV in 1928 and New York's Al Smith appeared on TV the same year.

In the beginning there was a strong opinion that TV would be just a fad, and other entertainment would still dominate people's time. Were they ever wrong! Five and one-half hours is the daily working time of the average TV set, and it's increasing each year.

At Landwehr's TV & Home Appliances our TV maintenance has increased steadily. Our modern, advanced equipment enables us to service quickly and accurately. Most often we can do it right where your TV set stands. Phone 255-0700 next time for guaranteed satisfaction.

And when you need a new set, the displays of nationally-advertised TVs and stereos at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights invite you to look them over. Service with sales makes us popular.

Jim Davey, Chicago, won the Illinois State Table Tennis men's singles championship for the third straight year Saturday, while two Arlington Heights youths placed high in the finals.

Davey defeated Faan Hoan Liu of Arlington for the title. Liu's sister Faan Yeen was runnerup to Barbra Taschner, Mundelein, in women's singles.

Faan Hoan teamed with Paul Pashuku, Chicago, to win the men's doubles over Leonard McNeece, Maywood, and Davey.

Other results follow: Class A, McNeece, first; John Hart, Chicago, second. Class B, Joe Bujacski, Roselle, first; Taschner second. Class C, Paul Jordan, Peoria, first; Ira Wiener, Chicago, second. Class D, Jordan, first; Tom Butts, Peoria, second.

Play was conducted at the Chicago Table Tennis Club, 2047 N. Milwaukee, Chicago.

Palatine baseball league registration

Palatine North Little League registration will be conducted at Winston Park School Saturday Jan. 17 and 24 between 9 a.m. and noon. Players between 8-12 must register at this time.

Boundary requirements are north of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad tracks, west of Rte. 53 and south of Dundee Rd. Birth certificates are mandatory and parents must accompany registrants.

The fee is $35 for one individual, $50 for two and $60 for three or more.

Palatine North has established a Pony and Colt League for boys 13-14 and 15-16, respectively. Registration fees are the same as above.

Saturday signup in HEAA soccer club

The Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. will hold its annual spring soccer registration on Saturday, Jan. 17 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Vogelei Barn.

Boys and girls in grades one through 12 are invited to sign up. For further information contact Joe Wrobleski at 885-1389 or Dave Farr at 885-4845.

TV History

by Ed Landwehr

Public television has been on the market for about thirty years, but it is much older than most realize. The first picture tube patents were issued in 1923. President Hoover televised a speech on April 8, 1927. A play "Queen's Messenger" was viewed on TV in 1928 and New York's Al Smith appeared on TV the same year.

In the beginning there was a strong opinion that TV would be just a fad, and other entertainment would still dominate people's time. Were they ever wrong! Five and one-half hours is the daily working time of the average TV set, and it's increasing each year.

At Landwehr's TV & Home Appliances our TV maintenance has increased steadily. Our modern, advanced equipment enables us to service quickly and accurately. Most often we can do it right where your TV set stands. Phone 255-0700 next time for guaranteed satisfaction.

And when you need a new set, the displays of nationally-advertised TVs and stereos at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights invite you to look them over. Service with sales makes us popular.
